ROOSEVELT WAVERS ON RULES

Today

Boiling in Chicago. Beer, Perhaps, Not Soon. The Turtle's Head. Britain Listens, Builds.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

ALTHOUGH SUNDAY is quiet in many places, it was not so in Chicago. Thanks to the depression and failure to do anything effective about unemployment, Democrats have their "great chance."

Many of them are busy spoiling it.

ELECTION BETTING has started. Huey Long, a powerful personality from Louisiana, who is "sorry he ever went to the Senate," bets $1,000 against $500 that Gov. Roosevelt will carry Texas by at least 100,000, regardless of bitterness about the two-thirds rule.

LADIES TALKING politics in Chicago, decide that for sometime to come "breadlines" will be more important than "party lines."

Mrs. D. A. McDougal, of Sapulpa, Okla., is glad women are paying more attention to breadlines than waistlines or "skirtlines" above the knees or below the ankles.

Unless something is done, soon, the breadline may become the only important line in America.

SENATOR JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS' withdrawal from the presidential race is encouraging to Gov. Roosevelt. The "stop Roosevelt" movement hoped to keep Senator Lewis' Illinois following intact to use in their fight.

WILLIAM GREEN, able head of the American Federation of Labor, wants five things in the Democratic platform, a five-day week, shorter working hours, federal work to give employment, old age pensions AND BEER.

The five-day week may come, without platform help, as there isn't enough work for six days. For that matter it may be a four-day week. Beer seems probable. You would not have believed it a year ago. But it may take a year or two or longer to get it.

BOYS OF FANWOOD, N. J., used to believe that the head of a snapping turtle, cut off, did not die until sundown. Superstition never dies, no matter how often you cut off its head.

Port of Spain, Trindad, tells of "a frail, bearded Spanish mystic," suddenly coming from the mountains to the village of St. Helena to announce that within six months the world be burned up.

Chicago would say, coldly:

"Go back to the mountains and get more details."

The credulous villagers have given up work to devote all their time to meditation and prayer.

The prophet has gone back to the mountains. He will be annoyed six months hence, but have a good excuse.

THROUGH FOUR GATES, as Bunyan would say, you find easy access to the human mind, the gates of superstition, greed, race hatred, religious hatred.

A hundred times the end of the world has been announced and believed. At the beginning of the year 1,000 many sold their lands and goods for next to nothing, put on white robes, and went up into the mountain to be as near Heaven as possible—when the end came. It did not come and won't come in 100,000,000 years.

The late Andrew D. White, president of Cornell University, tells of a Jewish prophet who, long after Christ, announced himself as "the Messiah," gathered a great following and announced that he could walk upon the water and those that believed in him could do the same. He walked down a steep bank into deep water followed by a big crowd. All were drowned. Leaders in superstition often believe what they say. That makes them dangerous.

WHILE OUR government talks sweet nothings about disarmament, the British listen, murmuring, "by all means," but they continue building bigger and better airplane bombers, while we suggest that such wicked machines be abolished.

Last Saturday the British air minister showed, at Hendon, a new gigantic bomber, secretly built, capable of doing 200 miles an hour, four miles above the earth. Two hundred and fifty thousand paid admissions. A quarter of a million more gathered outside the airdrome.

A NIGHT bomber was also displayed, scores of pursuit planes were sent up in mimic warfare to attack the bombing machines.

Pilots in the airplane squads participating included scores of bank clerks and other civilians, almost as skillful as Britain's army and navy fliers.

Britain talks disarmament as sweetly as anybody, but goes ahead with plans to RULE THE OCEAN OF AIR as she has so long ruled the water ocean.

THE OLD GOLD prospector, with his slow donkey, cautiously tapping rocks, on the lookout for Indians, would wonder at modern prospecting by airplane.

Airplanes are flying over the forests, seeking places to land in the "new Yukon gold fields."

An airplane prospector can stake out claims in six hours that the old prospector could not reach in two months.

INTERESTING information from Bangkok about Siam's revolution. King Prapadhipok himself encouraged it.

He was worried about the drop in rice exports, caused by Siam's foolish gold standard. Rice to Siam is what coffee is to Brazil. And gold seems not to agree with eastern lands.

SO, like Louis XI, of France, the King of Siam decided that his great nobles were becoming

THREE HELD IN GIRL'S DEATH

Police Told of Struggle In Truck; Victim Found Unconscious in Man's Auto

A girl and two men were being held today while county and city detectives sought to determine whether Mary White, 25, of McKeesport, was murdered or met an accidental death following a party in a South Side speakeasy.

McKeesport Police Chief John Whalen revealed this afternoon that one of the men—Edward Geltz, 42, 702 Locust street, McKeesport—had admitted fighting with her in Geltz's truck near Point Bridge last midnight.

A post-mortem showed 12 broken ribs, a torn lung and punctured spleen.

Whalen said Geltz had told him Miss White and the second girl, Marie Pryor, 22, of Mulberry way, McKeesport, had wanted him to drive them to Bulger, Pa.

After the speakeasy party, Geltz and Miss White started to argue in Geltz's truck, which he uses to haul mail from the county airport to McKeesport postoffice, police reported.

Geltz then left the two girls, Whalen was told, and Andrew Roll, 34, of East street, North Side, noting a crowd about the injured Miss White, offered to drive them home.

Outside Miss White's home in Ferry street, McKeesport, Patrolman Raymond Morgan found her dead in the car while her companions were in her home.

The two men and Miss Pryor, charged with suspicion, will be arraigned tomorrow.

LINDY READY TO TESTIFY AT TRIAL

Nurse of Murdered Baby Also Waits Call to Talk Against Alleged Hoaxer

FLEMINGTON, N. J., June 27. — (AP.) — With Col. Charles A. Lindbergh watching from a nearby table, John Hughes Curtis went on trial today for impeding justice in the search for the kidnapers and murderers of the Lindbergh baby.

As court was convened by Judge Adam O. Robbins, Curtis sat at the defense table, staring straight ahead, and Col. Lindbergh sat at the prosecutor's table, his arms crossed and an expression of close attention on his face. The two men did not look at each other.

Among other prospective witnesses in the courtroom, in addition to Lindbergh, were Betty Gow, the murdered baby's nurse, and Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Wheatley, the Lindberghs butler and housekeeper.

The prosecution won the first engagement in the trial when a motion by the defense for removal of Harry Stout, one of the prosecution's attorneys was denied.

The defense applied for the removal of Stout on the ground that when he was being considered as a defense lawyer he learned secrets of the defense strategy.

Foes' Lines Holding Tight As Convention Starts; 1st Ballot Deadlock Seen

STATE GROUP WILL FIGHT FOR REPEAL

By MARK SHIELDS
Political Editor.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Pennsylvania's delegates to the Democratic national convention were on record today for the revolutionary proposal for nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment pending statutory action to modify the Volstead act and repeal national prohibition.

The action came through a series of anti-prohibition resolutions introduced by Judge Henry C. Niles, of York, at last night's caucus of the delegates, with instructions to Guy K. Bard, Pennsylvania member of the platform committee, that if their substance was not embodied in the national platform, he should bring in a minority report that the question may be fought out on the floor of the convention.

FIRST TO ACT

Pennsylvania is the first state represented in Chicago which has gone the length of proposed nullification. The proposal is embodied in a resolution adopted last night declaring against congressional appropriations "for pretended enforcement of the liquor laws within the states," setting forth that the money is paid to spies and informers, and debauches government.

Apparently many of the delegates did not realize the magnitude of the action they were taking, and the resolution was adopted unanimously.

Previously former Congressman

SENATOR BARKLEY

U. S. Senator Alben W. Barkley, forceful speaker, today's keynoter at the Democratic convention. This is a Wide World News Photograph Service picture.

NEW YORKER SEEKS REED VOTES

CHICAGO, June 27.—The battling Democrats opened their convention here today, outwardly united to fight President Hoover and the Republican party, but inwardly torn by snarling factions.

In ringing tones, the convention keynoter, Senator A. W. Barkley of Kentucky, proclaimed the Democrats' willingness to fight out the campaign of '32 on the record of the past three years of economic stress, for which he held President Hoover and the Republican party almost solely responsible.

The anti-Roosevelt allies were striving desperately to hold their lines intact against invasion of the "favorite son" ranks by the New York Governor.

The Roosevelt forces were meeting with great opposition in their efforts to secure abrogation of the traditional two-thirds rule and nomination of their candidate by majority vote.

LEADERS WORRIED

This opposition came not only from the Roosevelt foes, but from within their own ranks. The Roosevelt leaders were getting plainly worried by the vote in some of their own southern delegations against abandoning the two-thirds rule and it was reported they were seriously considering abandonment of their fight.

It did not appear today after a hectic night of state caucuses, that the Roosevelt managers could get the votes for a first ballot nomination—especially if it is to be attained by the traditional two-thirds route, over which every Democratic presidential nominee since Andrew Jackson has traveled. The Roosevelt managers claimed:

"It is Roosevelt on the first ballot by two-thirds (770 votes) or we will smash the rule and

GARNER SEEKS RELIEF TRUCE

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Speaker Garner shattered precedent today by assuming personal direction of negotiations between the House and Senate for a compromise on the $2,300,000,000 unemployment relief bill.

Garner appeared personally in the meeting of conferees who are striving to iron out difference between his bill as passed by the House and the Democratic program approved by the Senate.

Asked by newspapermen afterward if he had pointed the way to a compromise, the Speaker said he had done considerable "orating" but would not reveal the details of his discussion.

He said, however, he had confined his remarks to the sections of the bill dealing with emergency relief funds and expanding the borrowing power of the Reconstruction Corporation for construction loans.

Garner said he had not discussed the controversial public works section of the bill, to which President Hoover is opposed, feeling that was a matter for conferees to adjust by compromise.

Kline Appeal To Be Heard July 15

Judge Thomas D. Finletter, who presided in the trial of Mayor Charles H. Kline and his former supplies director, Bertram L. Succop, today notified counsel for both sides that he would hear arguments on the motion for a new trial, and setting aside the verdict, July 15, in Philadelphia. Kline was convicted by a Butler County jury on one count charging malfeasance in office, Succop on numerous counts.

Driver, 78, Admits Injuring Two Girls

A 78-year-old man today surrendered to police and said he was the driver of the automobile which injured two student nurses at Carson and Brady streets, last night.

John Peden, of 114 South Sixteenth street, after learning Mary Davis, 18, and Elizabeth Churella, 19, student nurses at South Side Hospital had been injured, appeared at the South Side Police Station. Miss Davis suffered an injury to her right hand and Miss Churella a fractured ankle.

GIRL SUICIDE IDENTIFIED

The girl who leaped from Liberty Bridge to her death in the Monongahela River, was identified today by acquaintances as Grace Raspbridge, domestic in a Mt. Lebanon home.

The identification was made by Russell Gamble, of Eighteenth street road, and George Lytle, of 34 Arbuckle way. They said positive identification could be made by Albert P. McCarthy, of 130 Orchard place, a half-brother of the girl. McCarthy was summoned to the morgue.

Gamble and Lytle said Miss Raspbridge had a diamond ring similar to one found on the bobbed-haired brunet who yesterday leaped to her death.

Hundreds streamed past the glass-covered slab which held her body in the morgue today.

Her wrist watch, a silver necklace with black stones, her costume, a two-piece cream-colored dress, trimmed in blue, white kid shoes and pink hat—these were other clues to her identity.

Schneider Gets Year In Election Fraud

Jack Schneider, former First Ward constable, refused a new trial by Judge William H. McNaugher in Criminal Court today, was sentenced to the workhouse for a year and fined $200. Schneider was convicted of conspiracy to falsely register voters in the primaries in which he was opposed by Paul Walsh, son of Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh, who was elected constable.

Anderson Better Despite Heat Effect

Councilman Charles Anderson was reported improved today in the home of his sister, Mrs. E. M. Kenna, Fifth avenue, where he has been confined for several days due to a heart attack. Warm weather has caused discomfort to the Councilman, but last night and today he was said to have shown gains.

Mine Guards Kill 1, Hurt 7 in W. Va.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 27.—Mine strike warfare flared today, with one man dead and seven wounded at the Maysville mine of the Kelley's Creek Colliery Company.

The dead man was James Shaffer, 30, one of the strikers. State police arrested two mine guards, Herbert Vance and J. R. Thompson. The wounded, two seriously, were brought to the Monongalia County Hospital here.

According to witnesses, a crowd of strikers and sympathizers jeered workmen unloading sand. Suddenly three guards are said to have opened fire in to the crowd, their bullets felling eight.

Plane Kills Hunter, Endurance Flier

ROSEDALE, Miss., June 27.—(AP.)—John Hunter, one of four brothers who set a world's airplane endurance record at Chicago two years ago, was killed here today when the propellor of his ship struck his head.

Girl Linked in Dr. Crippen Flight Found Destitute

PERTH, Australia, June 27.—(INS.)—Miss Ethel LeNeve, who fled from England in 1910 with Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, slayer of his wife, was located here today, living under an assumed name and in direst poverty.

Miss LeNeve was Dr. Crippen's secretary. She was arrested with him and brought back to England, and tried and acquitted of any complicity in the crime.

The Crippen murder was one of the most amazing in the annals of British crime. Dr. Crippen, a native of Coldwater, Mich., who had established a fashionable practice in London, tired of his wife and murdered her with a drug.

He dismembered her body and buried it in his cellar, and then fled the country with Miss LeNeve, who dressed herself in boy's clothing. He was apprehended on his arrival at a Canadian port—the first murderer ever to be taken into custody through the medium of wireless.

Dr. Crippen was convicted and hanged for his crime.

Ham Lewis' Beard Hides 58 Delegates

By WILL ROGERS

CHICAGO, June 27. — Ham Lewis, the Illinois Senator, parted his red whiskers Saturday and 58 delegates jumped out. He said to 'em:

"Boys, I can't feed you any longer. Go out and get the best offer you can."

Now there is 58 delegates thrown on the mercy of a broze convention. I went to my man, Bill Murray, and said to him:

"Bill, we can buy these Illinois delegates cheap. They are just home talent and belong around here and won't cost us much."

Bill says:

"Buy 'em h—, let's sell 'em ours."

Had breakfast with Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the keynote speaker. He rehearsed his speech all through it. I told him it sounded good to me, but I was eating, and that if he served the delegates a meal with it, it would be the most relished political speech ever delivered.

But it was a good speech, a Kentuckian can't make a bad speech.

Had a private chat with every candidate here. Al, always frank, said:

"I am not only trying to stop Roosevelt. I am like the rest of 'em, trying to stop everybody but myself."

Ritchie said:

"Well, Will, I stand for what the people seem to want. If I can just get some delegates to stand for me."

Garner's men feel that if the nominations should ever accidentally get to a question of ability, they have a splendid chance.

Talked with Gov. Byrd, of Virginia, a very high-class man, which is practically his only handicap.

Jim Reed, bless his old fighting heart, has got Missouri with him. When you can serve your state 40 years, and still have 'em with you, that's not a bad obituary for one tombstone.

Gibbons Finds Temperature At Chicago 142

By FLOYD GIBBONS
International News Service.

CONVENTION STADIUM, CHICAGO, June 27. — Hello, everybody.

Temperature here, 142 degrees, without the 7,000,000-candlepower spot-lights on Chairman John J. Raskob.

But what's heat to Democrats?

One of the old regulars from down state just pulled out his red bandana, mopped his face and said:

"Heat makes corn, corn makes whisky and whisky makes Democrats."

(Loud cries of "tain't so.")

That's what all that sea of delegates and spectators out there are wondering about.

Wondering whether this is going to be a near-beer, beer, light wines, ginn fizz, champagne, or soda water decision.

Wondering whether or not these Democrats will go the Republicans one better on the liquor plank. Waiting to see whether the grand old party of Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland and Wilson goes wetter than the Republicans did.

2 JUDGES BAN TRUCK HIRE QUIZ

Allegheny County's investigation of the hundreds of thousands of dollars it has spent for truck hire collapsed this afternoon.

The collapse occurred when Judges Ambrose B. Reid and W. Heber Dithrich ruled that Watson Bowser, Kittanning contractor, need not reveal the details of the $200,000 truck-hire job he performed for the county last year.

The court however, split, in giving its decision, for Judge Thomas M. Marshall, in a minority opinion, held that Bowser should be made to answer the questions asked at the investigation held before Controller Robert G. Woodside.

Bowser's trucks hauled much of the dirt at the new county airport. It was said that he was hired by the late Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong at a rate of 60 cents a ton.

ROOSEVELT'S FOES FIGHT TO HOLD LINES

New York Governor Appears Short of Nomination on 1st Ballot, Enemies Say

make it by a majority (578) vote."

They were openly using the threat of the rule revision as a club to whip the wavering into line. In many cases it was keenly resented.

ROOSEVELT WEAKENING

As a result after a careful survey of the battle front, the Roosevelt forces were reported to be weakening somewhat in their determination to force a fight on the abrogation of the two-thirds rule.

The formidable strength which they have encountered—it includes most of the elder leaders of the party—has served to make Gov. Roosevelt himself uncertain that he wants his nomination accomplished in the manner outlined by his managers here.

A compromise is in sight along the lines originally suggested by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, whereby the convention will be allowed to start under the traditional two-thirds nominating rule, but with a rider in the form of a special rule providing that after a certain number of ballots, say five, the convention will proceed to slap on the majority rule.

James A. Farley, the Roosevelt commander-in-chief, who burned his bridges behind him Saturday in a statement that "this thing (abrogation of the rule) must be done here and now," was noncommittal.

Concerning reports of the Harrison compromise, he said, "Nothing has been decided yet." There was a good deal of significance in that "yet."

Farley's statement on Saturday, which was positively for no retreat in the fight to abrogate the rule and jam through a first ballot nomination, he said, had Gov. Roosevelt's personal approval.

ADVISERS SPLIT

But it was quite evident today that some of the Governor's most important supporters had been on the long distance, too, and were acquainting him with the real situation in Chicago—which is that if his nomination is accomplished in this manner it will cause such a wide split in the party as to jeopardize his chances of election.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, is still working on his round-robin to pledge the leading figures of the party "not to support" any candidate who is nominated by this convention by other than the traditional two-thirds vote.

It was questionable, however, whether the Harrison compromise would be any more acceptable to the opposition than the original proposition. The opposition contended that the proposal was comparable to a football game in which one team unable to reach the goal line after "five downs" (five ballots) would then propose that the goal be brought to them.

BORE FROM WITHIN

The pivotal point of the Roosevelt assault was the Missouri delegation of 36 votes, committed to the candidacy of ex-Senator James A. Reed. The Governor's managers were boring from within the delegation to cause it to abandon the white-haired favorite son.

They felt that if they could eliminate just one more of the favorite sons, as Senator Lewis eliminated himself Saturday, they would create a victory psychology among the delegates that would result in a wholesale rush for the Roosevelt band wagon.

But Missouri was still standing behind Reed this morning. They voted in a stormy caucus to stick to Reed until he released them, and Reed himself said:

"I do not expect to release the delegation."

Another concentration point of the Roosevelt managers was Illinois. Since its break-up Saturday, they have striven desperately to win over Mayor Tony Cermak's Cook County delegates. They already have some 20-odd of the downstate delegates, but as the convention met the Chicago Mayor was proving an adamant customer. His votes are going first to Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago banker.

The Roosevelt managers did not have much luck with his own state of New York. In the initial caucus of the delegation it was voted, 65 to 27, to stand by the two-thirds rule. The question of candidacies was left for future determination. The 27 votes for abrogation of the rule were Roosevelt votes, and his managers were somewhat disappointed, for they had expected more.

Sitting on the sidelines, grim and thoroughly aroused, was Al Smith.

He took no active part in the caucus, but before this convention is ended it probably will see the gamecock of 1928, who polled more votes than any Democrat in all history, taking the platform to wage spectacular warfare against Roosevelt and most of the policies that the Roosevelt management here are pursuing. Smith is biding his time and getting more angry by the minute.

Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, manager of the Smith forces, was quite confident this morning that the anti-Roosevelt allies will win both the rules and the Shouse fight. He declared the tactics of the Roosevelt managers were proving a boomerang to the governor's chances for the nomination—as, indeed, some of the governor's supporters themselves were saying. Hague said:

"Many of the delegates realize that a nomination obtained under a process unparalleled in the history of the party is a tained nomination, and that any man who encourages this traitorous movement shows himself unworthy of the highest office in the United States.

"The delegates do not intend to stand idly by and see the party destroyed by the candidate who, in my opinion, is the weakest the Democrats can nominate.

'WORD GIVEN'

"Regarding the indefensible attempt to suppiant Mr. Shouse, I can give personal testimony that Gov. Roosevelt, through his acknowledged representatives, gave his personal word as a gentleman that he would support Mr. Shouse for this post."

This was pointed enough, but the nonquotable comment of the anti-Roosevelt leaders was still more so.

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, who will put Speaker John N. Garner's name before the convention, declared that "if the Roosevelt camp has any judgment and sanity it will abandon its ill-advised plans." Connally said:

"The Democratic party is bigger than any individual. And strong arm methods are not relished by real Democrats."

Irrespective of which side is right in its predictions, it was very obvious this morning that neither the rules fight nor the Shouse-Walsh fight can be settled without a battle royal and such a public exhibition of bitterness as will make it difficult to get together later.

There are almost as many vice presidential candidates in Chicago as there are delegates.

In their squabble for favorite son support, the Roosevelt managers have "made sweet talk" to a score of potential candidates, governors, senators and others. That talk is now coming around to plague them.

CALL FOR UNITY WITH GARNER

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Enthusiastic backers of Speaker John N. Garner today began a friend-making campaign in the belief that the Texan's bright star may emerge from the cloud of bitterness fomented by the Roosevelt drive for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"Unite on Garner" became the slogan of the Texas and California Garner cohorts as they moved among the delegates, avoiding entanglements and preaching harmony.

With a sizeable bloc of votes instructed for him and friends in many favorite-son delegations, the Speaker's chances admittedly depended upon the success of the stop-Roosevelt movement.

Reports that overtures had been made to Garner to accept the vice presidential nomination, were met by declarations that he would rather be Speaker of the House.

The Garner board of strategy, including Representative Sam Rayburn, named manager of the Texas Garner-for-President campaign, and William Gibbs McAdoo, was engaged in an effort to place the Speaker in a strategic position.

Later, at his daily press conference, Garner predicted that when the relief bill goes to the President "there will be some public work in it."

PARTY LEADERS TAKE UP DRY PROBLEM

Battle Against Roosevelt Plan Looms; Parleys On Issue Kept Secret

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—Platform-building Democrats today faced their first formal decision on the prohibition plank, saved for the last in recognition of its trouble-stirring qualities.

The Roosevelt-dominated platform sub-committee was agreed on a proposal to submit a repeal amendment to the states, but a stubborn contest impends, both in the whole resolution committee and on the floor, for a declaration recording the party for repeal and for immediate modification of the Volstead act.

CONFERENCE SECRET

More than two score other planks—carefully trimmed to one paragraph each to keep the platform, if possible, within the record-breaking goal of 1,000 words, have been tentatively accepted.

Farm relief, unemployment and war debt planks alone remained for completion ahead of the tail-end prohibition one when the committee resumed deliberations this morning.

Since the membership was divided on the agricultural declaration it was arranged to have an open hearing on this question late in the day. Despite the argument in committee, the Roosevelt machine was driving surely ahead with its program. The platform for 1932 will be one conforming to the ideas of Gov. Roosevelt.

A. Mitchell Palmer, former attorney general, brought the Roosevelt program to the committee and he has taken charge of the deliberations behind closed doors.

SILENT AFTER PARLEY

Thanks to the running start gained on the work, the drafting sub-committee expected to complete its job before midnight and a report from the whole committee to the convention by tomorrow appears certain.

Palmer and some of the Roosevelt leaders on the committee held a secret session last night revising some of the language intended for the remaining controversial planks. They announced nothing.

Famed '24 Votes' Will Be Boomed For Roosevelt

CHICAGO, June 27.—(INS.)—The voice that boomed into a million homes with unforgetable thunder in 1924 is going to boom in the same old way in 1932, the owner of the voice — W. W. Brandon, of Alabama—declared today.

The "24 votes for Underwood" man, again chairman of his state delegation, is all set to shout for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

A stocky little man with silver hair and eyes as blue as the shirts he wears, former Gov. Brandon supported Smith in 1928. In campaigning he was paralyzed so that he could neither walk nor talk. But now his voice is unimpaired and as powerful as ever.

A radio company tried hard to persuade the dynamic Alabaman to sign up as an announcer after the Madison Square Garden convention, but he had been elected judge of the Probate Court in Tuscaloosa, his home town, following his term as Governor, and he preferred to stay at home.

PARTY LEADERS SHED COATS IN HEAT

Traditional Weather Greets Democrats in Chicago; Garner, Ritchie Cheered

International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 27.—The Democrats suffered in traditional Democratic weather today.

The packed stadium was again a furnace. Coats and vests were peeled off.

The heat was made more intense by reason of the fact that the photographers won their battle to retain the great Kleig lights, which made everyone so uncomfortable during the Republican convention.

Every time some notable would appear on the front of the platform they would turn those great dazzling eyes on him while the cameras clicked and everybody sweltered.

APPLAUSE FOR RITCHIE

As usual, the stadium was slow in filling. Realizing that today's program was largely perfunctory, and only to dispose of the necessary preliminaries, the delegates took their time about arriving. Some of them cut it altogether.

When the solitary figure of Gov. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, of Oklahoma, himself a candidate, stalked into the arena 15 minutes before gavel time, only about a third of the seats were filled.

There was a smattering of applause as Gov. Albert C. Ritchie's loyal Marylanders moved in bearing placards, "We will win with Ritchie."

The platform was filled with the party notables — National Chairman John J. Raskob and his aide, Jouett Shouse, who is having a desperate battle for the permanent chairmanship with the Roosevelt forces; Joe Tumulty, former secretary to Woodrow Wilson; members of the national committee; senators and congressmen.

SIMILARITY IN MUSIC

As during the Republican convention which moved out two weeks ago, the great pipe organ, said to be one of the largest in the world, and two bands vied with one another in piping the delegates into their seats.

One of the numbers they rendered several times was "Happy Days." Up to date there haven't been many "happy days" for the Democrats in Chicago. They have been too busy battling.

William G. McAdoo, leader of the Garner forces, got a great hand when he came in. The band played "California, Here I Come."

But it was "Maryland, My Maryland," when Gov. Ritchie came in. The aisles were congested by this time to the point of suffocation, and as everybody wanted to shake hands it took him a quarter of an hour to move 100 feet.

MRS. OWENS ATTENDS

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owens was a distinguished occupant of the press box. It was just 36 years ago this month that her father, William Jennings Bryan, rose from his place in the press section of a Democratic national convention and took the platform to sweep it off its feet and win him the nomination.

Tall, handsome, garbed in severe black, she stood on a chair and surveyed the scene with a half smile. If she had any thoughts about it all she kept them to herself.

There was a great yell from the Garner forces when the Texas band crashed into the stadium and paraded through the aisles. The Big Bear flag of California and the Lone Star emblem of Texas floated ahead of them. The bandsmen had a tough time of it, for the aisles were so congested it was almost impossible to move.

Just when they were getting the middle aisle cleared, Mayor Jimmy Walker, of New York, and John F. Curry, the Tammany boss, came in, and it filled again as a crowd collected to shake hands.

'TIGER' FIGHTS ROOSEVELT

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Opening of the Democratic national convention today found Tammany in complete control of the New York delegation and grimly determined not to support Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidential nomination.

The Tiger rode roughshod over the Roosevelt forces in their first test of strength at the New York caucus.

Tammany Chieftain John F. Curry and his allies, by a vote of 65 to 27, jammed a resolution favoring retention of the two-thirds nominating rule through the caucus, despite the vigorous protests of the Roosevelt forces.

Up to the moment the caucus was called to order, James A. Farley, campaign manager for Gov. Roosevelt, stoutly insisted the New York executive controlled between 40 and 45 of New York's 94 delegates.

Belief is growing that Curry secretly is mapping plans to split his votes on the first ballot, entirely ignoring both Roosevelt and Al Smith, and then, when he feels the time is ripe, to swing all his strength to either Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, or Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland.

Sentenced to Pen In $493,000 Fraud

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—A sentence of three and one half to 10 years in Sing Sing Prison today was imposed on Thomas F. Curran, 41, former comptroller of the Worcester Salt Company.

Curran pleaded guilty to forgery in the second degree in connection with the theft of $493,000 which he obtained by forging stock certificates of the company and obtaining loans on the certificates.

NULLIFICATION ADVOCATED BY PA. GROUP

Judge Niles' Proposal to Withhold Funds for Dry Enforcement Wins Easily

Curtis Gregg, of Westmoreland County, selected as a member of the improtant rules committee, had opposed Niles' motion that Bard be compelled to submit a minority report if the majority of the resolutions committee did not bring in a repeal and modification plank complying with the exact terms of the Niles resolutions on those subjects.

Gregg was voted down when Niles agreed that the platform need meet his demands only in substance. Then the nullification went through without a ripple. Niles declared that the whole theory of federal prohibition was against the fundamentals of constitutional government and prevents the people making and changing their laws. His declarations were vociferously applauded, especially by Joseph F. Guffey, who sat in the caucus and ran the pro-Roosevelt organization with precision, and Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller of Pittsburgh.

Gregg previously had been the center of the first test vote between the pro-Roosevelt forces, managed by Guffey, and the Al Smith group, led by National Committeeman Sedgwick Kistler and Charles Alvin Jones, of Pittsburgh. He triumphed, 45 to 28, over George F. Whitmer, of Clarion, for member of the rules committee, which will recommend to the convention abrogation of the two-thirds rule for nominating presidential candidates.

The vote was as near a test between the Roosevelt and Smith strength as was afforded during a stormy caucus, in which cheers and boos greeted gains or losses for either side. Guffey, after the caucus, predicted that the majority rule would get 52 votes from the delegation, that Thomas F. Walsh for permanent chairman over Jouett Shouse would get 55, and that Roosevelt would receive 66 votes before the tabulation of the first roll call. He declined to say whether in this 66 he included six delegates from Allegheny County friendly to Roosevelt, but elected in districts carried by Smith in the primary.

VOTE WITH GUFFEY

These six delegates last night voted with Guffey on every controversial issue, Malcolm McDonald, Smith follower from the Thirty-first District, being the only one to vote for Whitmer. National Committeeman Kistler declined to revise his figures that Roosevelt would receive no more than 45 votes, but said that the ballot on the change of rules would be close within the Pennsylvania delegation.

Last night's caucus was a colorful affair. Charles D. McAvoy, of Montgomery County, was elected chairman of the delegation, sponsored by the Guffey leadership, and ran the meeting with the assistance of more than a score of voluntary parliamentarians in the audience who loudly shouted their approval or disapproval of his rulings.

Guffey occupied a front seat where he could steer the steamroller, and it moved smoothly except for the indecision of Gregg on the prohibition question. Allegheny County Chairman David L. Lawrence also had a front seat and was in frequent conference with State Chairman Warren Van Dyke as the caucus rumbled through its cut and dried proceedings.

GUFFEY GETS EVEN

Guffey had the upper hand and was getting even for past slights, a pleasant revenge which began when he elected Van Dyke state chairman last month to displace John Collins, of Coudersport. Guffey told a friend:

"They romped on me when they had me down and now I intend to do the same thing."

John McDonald, of Lackawanna, anti-Guffeyite, led the fight of the Smith forces unavailingly but with a persistence in stentorian tones which left no doubt as to his displeasure over what was going on.

Other officers of the delegation elected besides Bard, Gregg and McAvoy, were: Winifred Ammarell, Berks, committee on permanent organization, which will recommend Senator Thomas J. Walsh as permanent chairman; John O'Donnell, Philadelphia, to notify the presidential nominee of his nomination; Dr. J. C. Amig, Lewistown, to perform the same function for the vice presidential nominee; M. L. Benedum, Pittsburgh, who supported Hoover in 1928, honorary vice president of the convention, and Dr. Leo Munday, Wilkes-Barre, honorary secretary. All were Guffey selections.

Democrats Love Battle; Harrison Sees 'Hummer'

By SENATOR PAT HARRISON OF MISSISSIPPI

CHICAGO, June 27.—This convention is going to be a hummer!

Democrats love a fight. If they can't fight Republicans then they fight among themselves.

All indications point to a convention of contests. The feeling that was, at first, one of friendly rivalry between the candidates and their partisans is beginning to show signs of bitterness.

The Frank Hague statement aroused the Roosevelt following and they in turn aroused the Roosevelt opposition by the move to abrogate the two-thirds rule.

While the leaders have been making their prophecies, the rank and file of the delegates have not spoken. When they do, many well-devised plans may be destroyed. Only in rare instances can delegates be moved like automatons. Especially is that true of Democrats. When they get the impression that they are being used without consultation, a revolt is likely to come.

The two-thirds rule is traditional with the Democrats. Many of them are fundamentally opposed to a change. They cannot understand why greater reasons prevail in 1932 for its abolishment than in 1924 or in many other Democratic conventions for more than a century.

Murphy Demands Party Back 5 Billion Loan

CHICAGO, June 27.—(Universal.)—Frank Murphy, Detroit's young mayor, was fighting mad when he arrived in Chicago for the Democratic convention. He is a district delegate from Michigan.

Assailing the relief legislation pending in Congress as "wholly inadequate," Mayor Murphy demanded Democrats indorse the $5,000,000,000 federal prosperity loan to stimulate business and relieve unemployment. The Senate defeated the proposal.

Murphy threatened to carry a fight to the convention floor if the Democratic platform goes no farther on relief recommendations than the $2,300,000,000 Garner and Wagner bills.

Father Coughlin, noted Detroit radio speaker, accompanied Murphy. Immediately after leaving the train they sought out members of the platform committee to impress upon them the necessity for drastic federal action to break the back of the depression. Father Coughlin said of the relief legislation in Congress:

"It is a sop to Cerberus and a veil of deceit."

Mayor Murphy headed the recent conference of mayors in Detroit which demanded the $5,000,000,000 bond issue. Murphy later went to Washington to lay direct appeals before President Hoover and leaders in Congress. The President was cold to the plan. Congress adopted instead the Garner and Wagner bills. Speaker Garner's measure provides $1,200,000,000 in public works, the Senate bill only $500,000,000. Mr. Hoover opposes any bond issue for public works.

ROOSEVELT FORCES TO SPLIT OVER CHAIRMAN, SAYS BOWERS

SHOUSE REBUKE WOULD HURT PARTY

Political Writer Also Finds Opposition to Scheme to Revoke Two-Thirds Rule

(Editor's Note—International News Service will carry a series of stories on the Democratic convention by Claude G. Bowers, noted Democratic political writer, "keynoter" at the 1928 Democratic convention and author of many outstanding books on the history of the Democratic party. Mr. Bowers' first story on the Democratic convention follows:

By CLAUDE G. BOWERS

(Copyright, 1932, International News Service, Inc.)

CHICAGO, June 27.—There is a dynamic quality to the Democratic convention that was singularly absent from that which adjourned a week ago. The hotel lobbies fairly pulsate with emotion. There is nothing lonesome here. The contest for the presidential nomination is as spirited as any we have known, though no one doubts that Roosevelt is far in the lead. The most acrimonious discussions revolve around the two preliminary fights, over the permanent chairmanship and the abrogation of the two-thirds rule. Here the fight unquestionably is rather bitter.

On the permanent chairmanship contest, the Roosevelt forces will not be able to hold together. The reason is not far to seek. It is generally conceded that the majority should have the power to organize the convention; but the point is made that Jouett Shouse actually was commended for the permanent chairmanship and the press of the country carried the announcement. Under the circumstances the repudiation of the commendation by the convention would amount to a humiliation of Shouse.

SERVICE TO PARTY

No one seriously questions the claim of his supporters that during the last three years and more he has rendered service of immeasurable value to the Democratic party. Some Roosevelt men measurable value to the Democ- feel thus, and will vote for him.

More bitter and dangerous is the contest over the abrogation of the two-thirds rule. There are some who, on principle, are, and ever have been, against the rule, who believe it dangerous to party solidarity to set it aside under the existing circumstances. These are found among delegates who will support Roosevelt for the nomination.

Thus there promises to be a strange mix-up on this vote. There are Smith men from Connecticut who will vote to abrogate, and Roosevelt men from North Carolina and Mississippi who will vote against abrogation.

The contest here depends to a considerable extent upon the attitude of the southern delegations pledged to Roosevelt for the nomination. John Stewart Bryan, the distinguished editor of Richmond, Va., has sent a vehement protest to every southern paper. He bases his opposition on the ground that the abrogation of the rule will make the southern states the mere vassals of the North and West. This is in accord with the traditional position of the South for generations.

SOUTH DIVIDED

Others from the South, however, insist that this attitude was inspired by conditions existing in the decades following the war between the states and these no longer obtain.

There is every indication that the decision on this mooted question will determine the supreme event. It will be a bitter contest since, with the abrogation, practically all the candidates, except Roosevelt, would be swept out of the picture.

The explanation offered by those favoring the step is that the two-thirds rule wrecked the party's prospects in the convention at Madison Square Garden by prolonging the balloting until the party had been torn into warring segments. They say they want no repetition of that tragedy.

GOV. "ALFALFA BILL," OF OKLAHOMY . . "PLOTTING" WITH TWO CONVENTION DELEGATES

Democrats Know Just How Schmeling Felt

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

CHICAGO, June 27.—Today every western delegate got hold of a Tammany man by the lapels and did the giant swing.

They pulled, tugged and hauled. Not because they were pals, but because every delegate wanted to capture an eye-witness of the Sharkey-Schmeling scramble.

They were slightly amazed to learn that Sharkey won on points, but got a beating.

But, being Democrats, they could understand it.

The first resolution in the convention today will be unanimous in condemning Gunboat Smith.

After that, the boys will get down to business like a coal miner on the bottom level.

They must pick a nominee who can beat Hoover in November. And they have only four months to do it.

Looks like they will stay here until the Indians come back and start that Fort Dearborn fight all over again.

We will guarantee that nobody will be picked on the first ballot. The boys like their voting too much for that.

The Republicans may bolt their candidate at a gulp. But the good old line Democrats have seven stomachs like a cow.

M'ADOO RIVALS ENTER RACE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—(AP.)—Justus S. Wardell, chairman of the California Democratic state central committee, filed today for the party's nomination for the United States Senate. He will oppose William G. McAdoo at the primary election.

Mrs. Annie Riley Hale, of Pasadena, mother-in-law of Heywood Broun, New York columnist, also filed for the Democratic nomination for the office. She formerly conducted a health cult here.

Wardell is in Chicago as an observer at the Democratic national convention, instructed friends by telephone to file his declaration. They barely reached the office of Maj. Charles J. Collins, registrar of voters, before the time limit expired.

Wardell is a supporter of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidential nomination. McAdoo is chairman of the California Garner-pledged delegation to the convention. They seek the office now held by Senator Samuel M. Shortridge.

Through the friends who filed his declaration, Wardell declared for outright repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and restoration of liquor control to the states. He had previously criticized McAdoo's proposal for a national ballot on the prohibition question.

PREDICTS BOLT OF 6,000,000

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler was quoted by Dr. John A. Harriss as predicting a prohibition repeal plank in the Democratic platform "will mean 6,000,000 Republican votes for the Democratic nominee."

Dr. Harriss, president of the Broadway Association, made the statement public in a message sent to chairmen of Democratic state delegations, leading Democratic presidential candidates and other party leaders.

Dr. Butler, who fought for a repeal plank in the Republican platform, dictated the statetment to him, Dr. Harriss said, before sailing for Europe Tuesday, Dr. Butler said:

"I sincerely hope that in the public interest the Democratic national convention will do in respect to the Eighteenth Amendment what the Republican national convention failed to do.

"If this is done, I believe it will mean 6,000,000 Republican votes for the Democratic nominee."

Seabury Denounces Fight Against Rules

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—Samuel Seabury, prosecutor of the investigation of the New York City government, last night opposed the Roosevelt movement to eliminate the two-thirds nominating rule from the coming Democratic convention. Seabury said:

"Any candidate for the presidency who changes the rules which prevailed at the time the delegates were elected in order to win the nomination cannot, in my judgment, be elected."

What Candidates Are Doing

Associated Press.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT—While optimism reigned in his camp, the Governor, at Albany, sat at a telephone linking him to Chicago. He denied last night that he had asked any one to be his running mate. He also contradicted accusations of bad faith in refusing to support Jouett Shouse for permanent convention chairman.

ALFRED E. SMITH—The 1928 standardbearer, fighting Roosevelt, found time for church services and golf yesterday. One of his leaders, Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, predicted "humiliating chastisement" for the Rooseveltians.

JOHN N. GARNER—The Speaker of the House, at Washington, personally took command of efforts to speed agreement between Senate and House on unemployment relief.

ALBERT C. RITCHIE—The Maryland Governor, whose callers are many, had to cut short a visit from Senator Huey Long, Louisiana "Kingfish," to attend a tea given by women supporters. He smiled when Long accused him jokingly of being a "lady killer."

MELVIN TRAYLOR—The Chicago banker went into a caucus of the Illinois delegation and said he would rather "see the party go down into defeat than to win on a demagogic platform appealing to class prejudice."

WILLIAM H. MURRAY—"Alfalfa Bill" of Oaklahoma went to the head of the class in handshaking, and had several conferences. Into the wee small hours his friends continued to crowd in, so he lay down on a bed and stuck one hand over the side for a shake with visitors.

JAMES A. REED—The former Missouri senator was as assured as ever in his expressions of confidence that the Missouri delegation would be for him, despite attempts to get it to break. At his headquarters, he received Will Rogers and swapped quips.

M'BRIDE WARNS DEMOCRATS

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. June 27.—(AP.)—Dr. F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, said in an address here yesterday that neither Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, nor former Gov. Alfred E. Smith would be acceptable to the league as a presidential candidate.

He said the league, "when it comes to deciding between these two men, cannot choose between two evils."

Addressing a church gathering, he predicted the Democratic platform would recommend repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, but said "party platforms are only designed to give congressmen an alibi." Prohibition, he reiterated, is not a partisan issue.

He termed as "slander" and "purely propaganda," claims that high school and college students drink more under prohibition than before adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Roosevelt Consults Leaders by 'Phone

ALBANY, N. Y., June 27.—(AP.)—Steadfast in his declaration that he would not attend the Democratic convention, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt made use of the next best thing today—a listening post by direct wire to his lieutenants at Chicago. Optimism was prevalent in the Roosevelt camp.

Gov. White to Hold Ohio's Delegates

COLUMBUS, O., June 27.—(AP.)—Gov. George White, Ohio's "favorite son" candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said today that he did not intend to release the Buckeye delegates to the Democratic national convention from voting for him, as suggested by W. W. Durbin, of Kenton, a follower of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York.

Darrow Says He's Ready To Quit 'Crazy' World

CHICAGO, June 27.—(INS.)—Clarence Darrow, famous criminal lawyer who spent most of his life saving men from premature death at the end of a hangman's noose, is ready now to yield himself to death.

Wandering through political headquarters in a downtown hotel and watching the scurrying crowds with curiosity, Darrow told International News Service he was ready to die. He soliloquized:

"It's a crazy old world. Think of it. The human race need work but an hour a day to supply all it sneeds. There's no real human labor left. Everything is being done by machinery.

"There's plenty of wealth, but a rotten distribution of it. There's a tremendous surplus of food everywhere, and yet people are going hungry for want of food.

"Its all a big bughouse. I'll be glad to leave it."

Peace Advocates Parade at Chicago

CHICAGO, June 27.—(INS.)—Champions of world peace, who staged a parade during the Republican national convention, repeated the performance today for the benefit of delegates to the Democratic national conclave.

Twenty-five states were represented in the autocade, which rolled through downtown streets. In the van were Miss Jane Addams, joint winner of the Nobel peace prize, and Miss Jeannette Rankin, first woman member of Congress.

TUNNEY FINDS CONVENTION PUZZLING

Former Boxing Champion 'Tenderfoot' in Politics; Sees Harmony in Party

By GENE TUNNEY
International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Conventions are strange and weird things, unlike anything that has been imagined by this green observer. I feel like a tenderfoot who sees for the first time the expert lariatists doing their stuff. It's all foreign and exciting.

The statements continue to pour constantly and fluidly from each candidate's headquarters, as the front man with the hearty handshake whispers in your ear, "It's in the bag." There is great secretiveness about these whispered messages. All visitors are apparently taken into the front man's confidence. There must be some value to this propaganda that is created by the false statements and the lobby vaporings. It all seems to reflect the intelligence and stability of the various delegates.

It is believed that if it can be established in the minds of the wavering delegates that the victory of any one candidate is assured, or "it is in the bag" for Frank, or Al, or Jim, they will hop on the bandwagon so they can ride in with the winner.

Apparently, the great concern of a delegate is to be with the winner regardless of his fitness, or lack of it. As yet I have heard no word of economic issues. Discussions are only about candidates.

They tell me that all conventions are just like that. It occurs to me that it is small wonder that unemployed are now storming Washington. It seems like the past conventions are coming home to roost.

WOMEN URGE REPEAL

CHICAGO, June 27.—(INS.)—The Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform concluded a poll of possible candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination today, with the result that all stood in favor of repeal.

Miss Mary Dewson, head of the woman's division of the Roosevelt forces, sent the following telegram to Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, chairman of the organization:

"To the question whether Gov. Roosevelt favors the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment providing the states are protected the answer is emphatically yes."

Among those canvassed were Smith, Ritchie, Traylor, Byrd and Reed.

RECORD CORPS OF WOMEN AT CONVENTION

500 Occupy Spotlight at Democratic Pow-Wow; Speak Views Right Out

By MARGUERITE YOUNG

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—The biggest and busiest corps of women ever assembled in a political camp meeting claimed official place today in the Democratic convention.

More than 500 women, who are talking right out on every issue from candidates to rules, held tickets to the floor and platform in Chicago Stadium. They were delegates, alternates, national committee members.

Outside their number, one outspoken woman, who believes the vice presidency "would never suit Bill Murray, of Oklahoma because he's got to have something to do" typified spectator-articulateness.

'ALFALFA'S' WIFE

It was the Oklahoma Governor's wife who swept into the spotlight shared by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and a half-dozen other Presidents' kin by giving her ideas in the homespun, straight-spoken manner that makes "Alfalfa Bill" picturesque.

Shaking the dust of an auto trip from her black suit, she went to the Governor's headquarters "just to let him know I'm here," then motored about 40 miles to a big and happy—and politically permeated—reception at the Clarence N. Goodwin estate in one of Chicago's swankiest suburbs. There, tall and friendly, peering over the terraces through silver-rimmed glasses, she chattered absorbingly on all sorts of topics.

Around the straightforward Western woman, the garden party flowed merrily. Franklin Roosevelt's daughter, Anna Roosevelt Dall, and young Mrs. James Roosevelt were there beside Mrs. Goodwin, handsome and vivacious. Cornelius Vanderbilt — young Thomas Leiter — youthful Mrs. Frank Compton, President Wilson's niece.

HURLEYS ENTERTAIN

The War President's widow at the same time was being entertained by the Edward N. Hurleys. Maryland women are entertaining their candidate, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie.

But these social affairs were no more the be-all of the delegates' consciousness than was the sightseeing of their masculine colleagues.

They came back to their hotels and went into state caucuses. And then it was the two-thirds rule and the Roosevelt bandwagon rumble that claimed their conversation. Before midnight the Roosevelt women's headquarters, a seething pot for many days, was announcing three favorite-son delegations were "ready to crumble." At Al Smith's stand Mrs. Henry Moscowitz was still on the job.

It's this sort of activity that is being remarked by observers, and the women were ready to continue their performance today. They had a woman's breakfast scheduled for before the formalities, but they were talking straight politics.

COX ATTEMPTS PEACE ROLE

CHICAGO, June 27.—(INS.)—James M. Cox, peacemaker of the battle-torn Democratic convention in 1924, secluded himself somewhere in Chicago today, apparently trying again to pacify the warring elements of his party.

Despite statements at his home in Dayton, O., last week that he would not attend the convention, Cox arrived here yesterday and immediately conferred with Robert S. Hayes, of Columbus, O., one of the original Cox men when Cox was nominated at San Francisco in 1920.

Politicians saw significance in his trip to Chicago because it has been his policy never to attend conventions.

By many delegates, principally Ohioans, Cox has been considered a possible compromise candidate again this year.

Fined After Protesting Torpedo Throwing

If you see hooligans throwing torpedoes near women and children passing in Fifth avenue, near Wylie avenue, don't call Patrolman John Mazza—he might arrest you, as he did A. Becker, of 230 Brookside avenue, Beechview.

And Magistrate Leo Rothenberg might fine you $5, as he did Becker in Central Police Court today.

Becker testified that big firecrackers, exploded last midnight, made a woman hysterical. An infant in her arms and a 2-year-old child walking beside here were stung, he said, by the gravel from the torpedoes. When he told Mazza, Becker said, the policeman accused him of trying to show him how to patrol his beat, and arrested him on a charge of disorderly conduct when the latter asked for his badge number. Rothenberg said Becker "mustn't interfere with an officer."

Residents in many communities complained of being unable to sleep last night due to exploding firecrackers. Even downtown hotel guests were disturbed by premature celebrators.

KEYNOTE FLAYS G.O.P., FAVORS REPEAL VOTE

Barkley Denounces Hoover And Blames Mellon for 'Orgy' of Speculation

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—A biting attack upon Republican rule through three administrations and a plea for a vote on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment were laid before the Democratic national convention today in the keynote speech of Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky.

The Kentuckian punched and jabbed unceasingly at his Republican foes—calling the Harding administration the "darkest chapter of public betrayal in the history of this or any other nation," heaping blame on President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon for an "orgy of speculation and inflation that had no foundation in real values," and terming the Republican plank on prohibition "a promiscuous agglomeration of scrap-lumber."

DENOUNCES HOOVER

Barkley denounced President Hoover and the Republicans for the "exhorbitant and indefensible rates of the Smoot-Hawley tariff act and promised "to lift tariff-making above the sordid processes of log-rollers and back-scratchers."

They keynoter gave over the major part of his speech to mistakes he charged to the Republican party since 1920. He did go into the prohibition question rather deeply, however, and urged that the convention recommend the passage by Congress of a resolution submitting a repealer of the Eighteenth Amendment for ratification by the people through state conventions, whose delegates shall be chosen upon this issue alone. He declared:

"If the people are to pass again upon this question, let them pass upon it in such bald, naked and unequivocal terms as to make their decision intelligent and certain."

The history of the stock market "boom" was recounted and blame for the collapse was placed upon the leaders at the helm of the nation. Barkley said expenses of the national government had increased under President Coolidge "more than $650,000,000." He gave credit to the present Democratic House for reducing President Hoover's requests for appropriations "by more than $100,000,000."

FOR FARM AID

He bespoke enactment of laws setting up co-operative agencies through which the farmer may work out his own problems over a period of years, along with a recommendation to take the government out of "the dubious adventure of speculation" in farm products, and installation at the head of the Department of Agriculture of a secretary who has "some knowledge of the subject and some sympathy for those who struggle with it."

He promised that the Democrats would "abolish every useless office, every unnecessary bureau and commission" and proposed that the Democrats solve the tariff problem by inaugurating friendly international conferences with a view to reopening normal trade channels in the world and make the Tariff Commission a fact-finding body for Congress.

RESERVE ACT REVISION

To strengthen the banking structure he urged giving consideration to revising the Federal Reserve act to insure more direct contact with commercial banks and borrowers.

He ridiculed "fine spun" distinctions between local and national responsibility on unemployment and deplored "sophomoric dispute over the identity of first aid" while the nation's "defenders or their dependents suffer from want and neglect."

The keynoter advocated consideration of the five-day week or the six-hour day as a possible solution of employment problems growing out of the country's industrial advances and, concluding, declared:

"In all the generations of American history the people in every great crisis have turned to the Democratic party to lead them from the wilderness of disappointment and disaster."

Three More Quakes Rock Mexican City

MEXICO CITY, June 27.—(AP.)—A dispatch today from Colima, which was hit by a tidal wave last week, said the city was shaken yesterday by three more fairly sharp earth shocks. They were accompanied by low subterranean rumblings which terrified the people.

Belated reports said that the towns of Cihuatlan and Camotlan de Miraflores were destroyed by last week's quakes. No lives were reported lost.

HUTTON FIGHTING LOVE CHARGES

DAVID HUTTON

Wife Proud of Mate Freed By Governor for Bolt From Pen Years Ago

By HELEN NOLAN
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 27.—"Ashamed of my husband? Why, I'm proud of him! He proved he was a strong, brave man. But I don't know how to express my gratitude to Gov. Rolph for pardoning him."

For Mrs. William Collins construes the action of the Governor of California as a complete pardon for her husband, who was arrested last week for breaking out of San Quentin prison 19 years ago.

In a three-room apartment on Haviland avenue—a spotless little home—Mrs. Collins and her daughters, Millie, 6, and May, 13, were dining on ham and cabbage, and the mother said:

"This is Bill's favorite dish and it's the first meal I've been able to eat since they took him last Tuesday night. I read in the papers this morning that Gov. Rolph said it would be an outrage to extradite Bill and send him back to prison after all these years. That's the same as a pardon, I think, don't you?"

BETTER THAN PARDON

Of course it was, I assured her, better than a pardon, lots better, and Mrs. Collins, nodding, said:

"I'm so glad of that. You see, I never knew until he was arrested that long ago he was arrested for robbing a street car in Sacramento, 21 years ago. But even if I did know it, it would have made no difference to me.

"With that fear in his heart all these years, don't you think it speaks well for a man who can live as straight and splendid as he has done all this time."

And there was no affectation in that pride. Mrs. Collins sent Millie and May to a movie to celebrate a little, she explained, and also to get a better chance to talk about her husband now in the Tombs, awaiting release that should come tomorrow. Did I know, she asked, that:

"Bill has handled hundreds of thousands of dollars in money and goods for the American Railway Express, where he's worked for years now, without losing a penny of it. Did you hear that 3,500 expressmen, everyone on the payroll I guess, signed a petition urging Gov. Rolph to be merciful to him. And neighbors come in often to ask if I'll mind if they send a letter too."

WAITED FOR HOURS

The mother and children learned of Bill's arrest after Millie had gone to the subway station and waited hours Tuesday night to meet him. May was waiting at home to tell him all about how she passed her regents' examination in Holy Family Parochial School and would surely be promoted. The American Railway Express sent word that Bill's job would be waiting for him—even if he was away a long time.

Oakland Marchers To Boost Picnic

Members of the Oakland Board of Trade will hold a boosters' parade tonight for the annual picnic for school children of the district, to be held Thursday in Kennywood Park. About 10,000 children are expected to attend. R. T. Alexander is general chairman.

AIMEE AMUSED BY BALM SUIT

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—(INS.)—Charges of "witness stealing" were hurled today in Myrtle Hazel Joan St. Pierre's $200,000 heartache suit against David Hutton, rotund music master husband of Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton, evangelist of Angelus Temple.

Dave was provoked when four witnesses, including Edgar Eben, radio organist, he had subpenaed, declared their testimony would aid Myrtle, attractive young nurse.

Eben, a one-time sweetheart of Myrtle's, said she was "pure, high-minded and honorable."

Said David, following a visit to Aimee, who is ill in a sanitarium:

"They'll be amazed when I take the stand. Aimee was merely amused when I told her what was going on."

Miss St. Pierre, as she prepared to resume the witness stand today, cried:

"They're telling lies, lies, lies about me."

Senators 'Listen In' To Convention News

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(INS.)—Democratic Senators unable to attend the party's national convention in Chicago listened today to radio broadcasts of the proceedings.

A radio receiving set was in service in the marble room back of the Senate chamber. It was installed by Senator Dill (Dem.), of Washington, a leading Roosevelt supporter.

Wilkerson Action Delayed by Senate

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—The Senate Judiciary Committee today failed to consider the contested nomination of Judge James H. Wilkerson, of Chicago, for promotion to the Circuit Court bench, probably killing action at this session.

JOBLESS IGNORED

Haven't heard much yet about anything in store for 10,000,000 jobless people and their 50,000,000 dependents.

And nothing at all about keeping up the national defense when all the rest of the world is handing Hoover's emissaries in Europe and Japan the raspberry.

Six hundred airplane pilots—pilots of air lines—cream of American aviation—each with more than 3,000 hours to their credit—are represented here. They're asking for a plank giving them to chance to be a reserve force in case of war. Otherwise they're just factory hands.

Boys and girls, this was a lonesome town yesterday.

Rumor got around that the Tammany Tiger was loose. Those morning newspaper boys said Frank Roosevelt was the only tiger tamer in the whole flock of presidential candidates.

So there was a huddle of forlorn hopes in the Congress Hotel. Dressed-up candidates all hoping to snag a few of those 58 delegates that Jim Ham Lewis turned loose when he took his whiskers out of the scrimmage.

BACK TO OLD STYLE

Well, those favorite sons and big shots in the presidential race were button-holing everybody who came along. Just like an old aldermanic clam bake. Back to the old style of campaigning.

And then, by jingoes, all the crowds gathered around the presidential impossibilities, turned tail and ran down Peacock alley after a young fellow, who had just climbed out of a taxicab with a lot of baggage.

Well, sir, it was my old friend, Gene Tunney.

Delegates unhooked their badges and hung them on Gene's coat. Lady Democrats had their handkerchiefs and white leather handbags and their convention tickets autographed and Gene doggoned near got kissed by gals from 14 states and—

Well, Gene just spooled Sunday afternoon for the presidential also-rans.

Gene's here at the ringside for International News Service.

Hope the presidential candidate wins by an undisputed count.

IF she offends with perspiration odor in underthings—protect daintiness this 4-minute way!

How can she step from her bath all fresh and sweet—then put on yesterday's underthings?

She can't escape offending when she does this! For all healthy people perspire, and underthings absorb perspiration. Even though we don't notice it ourselves, other people do. It ruins the charming effect we want to make.

Why should any girl run such a risk? It's so easy to remove the slightest danger of offending. For Lux coaxes out every trace of perspiration acids and odors! So swiftly, too. Just 4 minutes Luxes all one day's underthings and stockings. Keeps colors and fabrics lovely as new so much longer. Economical!

Wash this 4-minute way. One tablespoon of Lux does one day's undies . . . stockings, too! Use lukewarm water—Lux dissolves instantly in it.

Never rub dainty lingerie with cake soap. Rubbing tends to streak and wear out silk.

Avoid ordinary soaps—cakes, powders, chips. These often contain harmful alkali which weakens threads, fades color. Lux has no harmful alkali—nothing to harm the daintiest color or fabric. Anything safe in water alone is safe in Lux.

FATHER DUFFY, HERO PRIEST, MOURNED

Noted War-Time Figure Dies In New York Hospital; Was Decorated 4 Times

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The city was in mourning today, for Father Duffy, of the Rainbow Division, chaplain of the "Fighting 69th" and beloved soldier priest, is dead.

The veteran, four times decorated and cited for valor, succumbed in St. Vincent's Hospital after a brief illness, in an atmosphere of peace, surrounded by friends, including his war-time commander and fellow priests with whom he had been laying out plans for the Catholic summer school, of which he was president.

HAD MANY HONORS

Msgr. Francis Patrick Duffy, a lieutenant colonel chaplain, rector of the Church of Holy Cross, was decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross, Distinguished Service Medal, the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the Croix de Guerre with palm, and holder of a citation for valor for crossing the Ourcq under heavy fire. He was known throughout the A. E. F. for bravery in ministering to the wounded.

Later he attracted international attention by taking the lead in denying the war propaganda stories of German atrocities and cowardice.

His book of his military experiences was circulated throughout the world. One of the war-time anecdotes for which he was famous had to do with an occasion when he lined up behind a Jewish chaplain at the mess wagon on a Friday morning, both wondering what the scant menu was. Father Duffy sniffed the air, grinned, and replied:

"Rabbi, it's bacon, so we're both out of luck this day."

JUST PLAIN HUMAN

In a preface to his book of experiences he wrote:

"I am a very Irish, very Catholic, very American person if anybody challenges my convictions. . . . But normally and let alone, I am just plain human."

Alfred E. Smith gave him credit for supplying material for answers to theological questions raised in the church and state controversy between Smith and Charles G. Marshall in 1927, but he asserted Smith wrote the whole reply himself.

Asked in 1927 if he had prayed for Gene Tunney when the latter was knocked down in the second Dempsey-Tunney fight, the clergyman responded that he had not, for he "thought it wasn't fair for an Irishman to have help in a fight."

Prayers were chanted for Father Duffy at all masses of all churches in the archdiocese here yesterday. Solemn high mass of requiem will be celebrated Wednesday.

RETURN URGED FOR KAISER

BERLIN, June 27.—(AP.)—Return of the Hohenzollerns to the throne of Germany was called for today by the Nationalist party, in the midst of a three-cornered, continuing strife among the South German states, the Von Papen government and Adolf Hitler.

The restoration of the Kaisers was proposed yesterday at a party caucus by Alfred Hugenberg, Nationalist leader, who declared the Nationalists favored a return of the monarchy.

Four more persons were killed and many injured in political clashes yesterday.

In the meantime, at a secret meeting with Chancellor Von Papen and Gen. Kurt Von Schleicher in Berlin, Hitler was reported to have been asked by the Chancellor, as a personal favor, to curb the violence of his brown-shirted followers.

There was an official denial that the meeting was held, but on reliable authority it was learned the Chancellor asked Hitler to take his uniformed followers off the streets because the constant fighting had damaged Germany's cause at Lausanne.

The Chancellor also conferred with President Paul Von Hindenburg. Supporters of the government appeared to be quite dissatisfied with newspaper interviews attributed to the Chancellor at Lausanne last week.

SALVAGERS WIN GOLD BULLION

PLYMOUTH, England, June 27.—(AP.)—The Italian salvage vessel, Artiglio II, today was permitted to unload gold bullion recovered from the hull of the wrecked liner Egypt last week.

An order of the admiralty marshal released the metal from seals in the Artiglio's hold, and it was placed in boxes pending "certain legal formalities."

The Artiglio II was free to return to the vicinity of Brest, France, where the Egypt lies in more than 300 feet of water, and try for the rest of her precious cargo.

The gold was held aboard the Artiglio II yesterday because of legal action from French salvagers, who claimed it was they who had located the wreck before the Italian salvagers went to work.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Well, I saw the fight and if Schmeling's manager feels that he was tricked out of it, that's all right with me . . . I wouldn't want to win that way, and if I had made any wagers on it, believe me you could call me a welcher and that wouldn't disturb me, either . . . I always thought that when a championship title was at stake, and the fight was that close, that the champ rated the benefit of any doubt . . . The only satisfaction I really got out of it was looking over the verdicts of the boys who cover sports and almost all of them decided that Max won it, but press notices are no balm, are they? . . . Mr. Ziegfeld phoned. Said that he was the "sucker who dropped $190,000" on "Hot-Cha" and he added that he also drew 16 weeks of illness as a bonus . . . Bill Morrow was in. Said that here it is vacation time and nearly everybody is looking for two weeks' work with pay!

Found out that lovely theme song's name that Blossom Seeley and Benny Fields use on the air—"Modern Melody" . . . They only have a week to go, by the way, because no commercial has come along. Too bad—grand team . . . The J. Hydes, who are telling it to a judge, are not with the Morris agency . . . Jean Harlow's cousin, Elsie Carpenter, was in. Very pretty. . . . If it's an orchid you want to toss at anybody chuck one at Dorothy Stickney's understudy in "Another Language" . . . She's a kid named Laura Straub and her curtain calls are abundant.

Arthur Richman's wit hasn't faded in the least. At the Irene Fenwick affair the other night he stifled two fellers who look similar — "amiably undistinguished" . . . "One can double for the other any time," said Arthur, "and anybody in the world can double for either!"

Incidentally, Mark Hellinger and Marc Lachmann have done a new scenario—a natural, too—the tag being "Name in Lights" . . . Next time you use a simile use mine: As exhausting as a silver-fizz hangover.

You can safely warn any would-be stick-up gents that the openair box office in front of the Palace never contains more than $100—and that there always is an armed guard in plain clothes too near . . . Here's a refreshing item considering how times are—an old razor strop firm, recently bought out, formed a benevolent ass'n for their women employes when it folded up. So that even to this day, women in financial difficulties who worked for them, receive substantial checks regularly . . . Carmen Barnes has a Baron for a new beau . . . Movie tests are now easier to get than at any time; one firm gave 30 of them yesterday . . . And feminine clothes models are so scarce that some of the big firms are now advertising for them in the Sunday rags . . . That was one racket I thought was peopled plenty . . . Saw Bert Wheeler and his new flame in one of the illegal rendezvous last night... A drunk at the next table got very sociable and handed Bert's girl a bottle of wine..."Hey!" yelled Wheeler, "don't give that gal wine—she might get used to it."

There is an exciting picture at the Mayfair . . . "Bring 'Em Back Alive" has plenty—and the reason the fight between the tiger and the python winds up in a draw is that the censors interfered . . . Jack C was in with this: That the Democratic Nat'l Committee may take over the minority plank of the Republican outfit and adopt it as their own. They contend that this would give them at least 40 per cent of all Repub delegates and the entire Demo delegation. Not a bad idea . . . Also that the Senate Committee on Banking has gotten away from party leaders . . . The investigation, it seems, was started by Hoover who thought that by curbing some short traders the market would go up. Instead the investigation has gone into every phase of the Stock Exchange . . . It was so hot, says Jack, that one of the best known ambassadors, who was a tremendous short trader, resigned his seat rather than be called before the Senate and embarrass the President.

Then, too, there is plenty of blackmailing going on down in the Street—not because the short tradesmen are worried about the Senate, but because now they know they'll have the Income Taxers to reckon with—and many a broker is being held up for ransom by clerks they've fired—clerks who know they covered up this or that item on their books years ago . . . He fascinated me nearly all afternoon with tales about those birds down there and those in Washington . . . Nice people we have to represent us . . . He said that on account of the many revolutions in South America, the pay of these diplomats in Washington has been so greatly reduced—that many of the under clerks are peddling embassy liquor at reasonable prices — and splitting with their superiors . . . And I break a law everytime I get real thirsty, huh?

Heard the most engaging tale last night about a Woman In Distress at a hotel here...She had been separated from her husband, who was going to all sorts of trouble to surprise her so he wouldn't have to continue paying-her yellimony. Her director friend came on and was visiting her, when what should happen but you anticipated me! ...John Husband began banging on the door outside accompanied by too many private detectives...The frightened wife called downstairs and complained to the manager about men disturbing her outside her door and the manager said: "Sorry, madam, I'm afraid one of them is your husband and we can't interfere"... And then the plot got more interesting—the person (a woman) in the room adjacent slipped a note under the door-between. It read: "My side is unlocked, unlock yours and maybe I can help you"...What a break, huh?...And that's how the director escaped...Then the wife opened her door to let the disturbers in and you should have heard her go into her act of being indignant...Can you names, promised I wouldn't, but the incident was too exciting to keep to myself...I trust the wife never neglects that stranger next door in her prayers, if any.

STUDIOLAND :-: Reporter Peeks Into Places Where Movie Stars Are :-: ON THE SCREEN

'Skyscraper' Vehicle of Stars

Amid the vaporous haze of a Turkish bath sat Warren William, the while he talked of "cabbages and kings." William was taking his Turkish bath for one of the scenes of "Sk- -per Souls," a spectacular cosmopolitan production adanted from the serial story and best seller, "Skyscraper," by Faith Baldwin.

Warren William in this picture portrays the owner of a 102-story New York skyscraper. We find him in the sumptuous marble baths in the basement of this building. A towel encircles his torso. On marble slabs nearby are Wallace Ford, Norman Foster, George Barbier and other male members of the cast.

"This is one thing in which the screen has it all over the stage," said William. "In the realism of details. Imagine a real Turkish bath on the speaking stage."

Then the star became reminiscent.

"This reminds me of some of the nights in the trenches during the war," he observed. "The fog rolling so thick you couldn't tell friend from enemy."

FOUGHT AND ACTED

From that remark was elicited the fact that the war was the preface to Warren William's acting career. He was by way of becoming a newspaperman, when American intervention in France took him across the sea. His father owned a newspaper at Aitkin, Minn., his birthplace.

"After the armistice I got into a troupe of army thespians in a play called 'Under Cover,'" he said. "I had had no experience, but I played the lead. So, on returning to the states I decided to try the New York stage before going home. The best I could land was a road tour, and after that I joined a stock company in Erie, Pa.

"But I got my chance at Broadway in a play by Rachel Crothers, 'Expressing Willie.' Shortly after that my father expressed his opinion on the matter. He sent me a clipping from which he had gleaned the information I had turned actor. He entertained the hope I would be a better actor than a newspaperman and that he and the paper would manage, somehow, to worry along without me."

NO NEWSPAPER

William for his part, managed to worry on without the newspaper. He scored hits in plays like "Twelve Miles Out," "Let Us Be Gay" and "Those Who Love." He made such an impression in "The Vinegar Tree" that he was given first a test, then a contract by Warner Brothers. For that company he scored recently in "Beauty and the Boss," "The Mouthpiece" and "The Dark Horse."

He was then borrowed for the lead with Maureen O'Sullivan in "Skyscraper Souls." Others in the cast are Anita Page, Norman Foster, Veree Teasdale, Wallace Ford, Jean Hersholt and Gregory Ratoff and Helen Coburn.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Big Fight

YES, DEAR children, I attended the Big Fight. I saw Max Schmeling chop our Mr. Sharkey into fine bits, only to lose the championship in what was probably the worst decision since Adam made up his mind to take a bite of that well-known apple.

I am not a fight critic, however, and I have no intention of horning in on our sporting department. Besides, I note that a large majority of the boxing experts also agree that Schmeling won. That's bad—and it's the only thing that makes me feel that my eyes might have deceived me. When the fight experts agree on anything, there's something wrong somewhere.

But enough of this. Let's forget the alleged fight and go into some of the surrounding details. With me it was the customary situation. I've been attending these outdoor matches for some years. I wade through the crowds. I have my feet stepped on and my back bent.

I never fail to have trouble with my seats. Either someone is sitting in them when I get there or someone wants them after I arrive. I always lose my stubs. I get terribly warm and I long to be at home with a radio, an electric fan and a glass of pure grape juice.

When the fight is over it's always the same battle getting out of the place. On the way out I discover that my suit is full of paint. I finally fall into may car, only to learn that traffic is so heavy that I can't move anyhow. So there I sit—tired, worn, hot, angry and disgusted.

"As long as I live," I vow to my companions, "I'll never do this again. Even if the fight was good, I wouldn't have enjoyed myself. I'm finished with this racket forever."

But when the next big fight rolls along, where am I? Right you are. Sitting in my car—tired, worn, hot, angry, disgusted and vowing never to go again...

Among the favorite stunts of the wise boys at a big fight is the figuring of a method to beat the gate for as much money as possible—and still to wind up in a choice seat. Many of them dope out different ideas for different fights, but the one that is most generally practised is to pass the buck—or the two bucks—to the various ushers.

The system is simple and practical—when it works. But here's what happened to two Broadwayites of my acquaintance at the Schmeling-Sharkey encounter:

They bought two seats for the cheapest possible price; $2.30 each, I think they were. As soon as they were inside the stadium they went to work on the usher in the next section.

"Here's a couple of bucks," said the first wise man. "Can you fix us up with a couple of better seats?"

The usher was quite certain that he could.

"Follow me, buddy," he chirped. "I'm only to glad to take care of you. Right this way."

As soon as they were seated in that section, the first wise man signaled an usher in the section ahead.

"How much for two seats down there?" he whispered.

"Three bucks," replied the usher promptly. "I used to charge 5, but I gotta string along with the depression."

Well, there's no use boring you with the details. The routine was the same all along the line. Finally, after the expenditure of exactly $19, the two Broadwayites were seated as close to the ring as it was possible to get. And the first one smiled happily.

"I told you we'd do it, Frank," he gloated. "If we had bought seats like this from a speculator, they would have cost us $75 apiece. And we're here for less than $25."

At that precise moment, along came Mr. Gene Tunney and his party. Unfortunately, Mr. Tunney's stubs called for the seats that the two Broadwayites were so comfortably filling. In far less time than it takes to write this the two wise men were being hustled rapidly toward the rear.

They tried desperately to reclaim some of the better locations for which they had paid. But the stadium was filled now, and the attempt was futile. So, completely disgusted, they went far back to the rear of the place to sit in the cheap seats they had originally purchased.

And what do you think they found? You're right again. Their places were occupied by two tough-looking bozos who dared the Broadwayites to put them out!

The two wise men went home . . .

I wasn't going to attend this fight, I really meant it this time, and I fully expected to be in Atlantic City at the time of the fight. But, on the Sunday preceding the big engagement, I was given a contract that I had to fill. A very important gentleman in the newspaper game insisted that I take him. And conditions being as they are, I couldn't very well refuse. So I spoke to Jimmy Johnston, the genial promoter of the fight.

"Jimmy," I said, "I hate to ask you for this favor, but I can't help myself under the circumstances. I've got to have two press seats as far front as possible. You're not going to fail me, are you?"

Mr. Johnston shook his head.

"Mark," he returned, "as long as you're a friend of Dan Parker, there's nothing I wouldn't do for you. The seats will be there for you."

Jimmy made good—and the seats were delivered. I deeply regretted asking for passes, because I hate to put myself under obligations to anyone. But, in this case, what else could I do?

Before the fight the very important gentleman had dinner with me. He didn't seem to be in a particularly good frame of mind.

"The food's not so hot," he grumbled. "It's hot out, too. They tell me we'll have a job getting to that stadium. Are you sure you've got good seats?"

I felt like poking him in the nose. And, as I write this, I don't mind whether he knows it or not.

"You'll see," I returned. "After all, they came from Jimmy Johnston. And if he can't take care of us, I don't know who can."

I didn't tell him that I had broken a promise to myself when I asked for those tickets. I didn't tell him that I had had no intention of attending the encounter and that I was going only because of him. I didn't tell him that I had been cheated out of a trip I wanted to make. After all, there I was. And I had to make the best of it.

In due time, as the saying goes, we reached the scene of the fight. We entered the bowl and we walked closer to the ring. And when they finally seated us we were in the third of the six rows of press sents.

Jimmy Johnston had done a noble job. The Mayor of the city was directly to our left and Commissioner Mulrooney was directly to our right. We couldn't have done better if we had built the doggone place.

I peered at my companion.

"Well," I asked, "how do you like the seats?"

He looked back into the endless sea of faces in the rear.

"Not so hot," was the amazing reply. "How the devil are we going to get out of here?"...

Erskin Will Direct in Movies

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.

At last a Hollywood defender among the wise lads who have come out from Broadway.

Chester Erskin, one of Manhattan's better known stage directors, will return to Broadway to do three plays and then will cast his lot permanently with the films.

In the world of the theater, Mr. Erskin was noted for his direction of "Subway Express," "Harlem," "The Criminal Code," "The Last Mile" and other successes. For the last two months, however, he has been going to cinema school under the tutelage of Lewis Milestone.

He has seen the picture, "Rain," filmed from start to finish and he is enthusiastic about the screen medium.

"It is one of the steps in the development of the theater," he contends. "I intend to stick with it."

Before he cleans up his Broadway affairs, however, Erskin hopes to develop picture material with three plays.

If it can be arranged, the first will be a dramatization of Christianson's "Two Living, One Dead."

In the meanwhile, he may try his hand at directing one picture for United Artists. He and Milestone are searching for a suitable story.

Lewis Milestone.

BOULEVARD TALK

Since those kidnaping threats, Josef von Sternberg is chaperoned by an armed guard, even on the golf course . . . Phil Berg and Polly Moran pulled the most awful rib on young John Mehan, the writer. Sorry, but it isn't revealable here . . . For the time being, Jean Harlow and Paul Bern plan no honeymoon trip. They'll be married and will return to the studio. Jack Gilbert will be best man . . . Packing their camping equipment on their car, Helen Twelvetrees and Frank Woody will leave shortly for a month's vacation in the High Sierras. Helen will not be back on the screen again until after the impending visit of the stork . . . Moe Morton would add a rum runner's race to the Olympic events . . . Visiting Paramount this week was Larry Vejar, who'll call signals for Notre Dame next fall . . . Clara Bow slipped quietly into Hollywood for a few days, but returned to the ranch and further reducing . . . Plenty of drama packed into that brief radio-gram the studio received from W. S. Van Dyke.

Jean Harlow.

"In the ice, and the sun did not set tonight."

Accompanied by 19 technicians and a small group of performers, Van Dyke is steaming northward towards Point Barrow. The schooner Nanook will be allowed to freeze in there for the winter and the film troupe will continue their journey into the Eskimo country by dog team.

CUT THE DECK

Someone asked Wilson Mizner if he had ever seen a professional gambler put out of countenance.

"Yes," replied Wilson, "Crossing the Atlantic one time, a friend of mine got in a game with a bunch of suckers. They gave him a deck of cards to cut. He did it and then turned pale. The deck he'd returned had a rubber band around it."

It's all set now for Kate Smith, favorite of thousands of radio listeners, to come out here and play a part in Paramount's picture, "The Big Broadcast."

Under a deal finally signed Friday, she will join Bing Crosby, the Mills Brothers, Burns and Allen, Donald Novis, Stuart Erwin and other well known performers in this romance of the radio world.

Among the feats of Kate Smith was to play 11 consecutive weeks at the Palace in New York.

Excavators Uncover Ancient Town Site

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—(AP.)—Existence of a hitherto unsuspected town life is indicated, authorities say, in the discovery of a palace more than 4,000 years old which the University of Pennsylvania Museum Expedition has unearthed at Tepe Hissar, near Damghan in Northwestern Persia.

Dr. Erich Schmidt, field director of the expedition in which the American Institute for Persian art and archaeology is assisting, said yesterday the palace was probably the center of a complete town site.

3 Dead, 3 Missing In Oklahoma Flood

CHICKASHA, Okla., June 27.—(AP.)—Sudden floods yesterday in South Central Oklahoma claimed at least three lives, and three children were missing, believed drowned in Rush Creek. More rain was forecast.

Thirteen persons were plunged into the creek when a small bridge collapsed as the party, in a wagon, was crossing after attending church services. Eight were saved.

Guns Found, 2 Men Held in Rum Case

J. J. McQuillan, 31, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., admitted in Central Police Court today that he "ran booze" from the New York town to Pittsburgh for Charles Seriani, 19, of Niagara Falls.

The two were arrested in the Fort Pitt Hotel when detectives found revolvers in their room. Magistrate Leo Rothenberg held them for court on a charge of violating the firearms act.

Senator's Daughter To Marry Ensign

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Laura, to Ensign Frank B. Miller. The wedding will take place in the fall.

The bride-elect was graduated from Holton-Arms School here in 1929 and since has attended Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans and American University and George Washington University here.

Two Girls Killed As Plane Hits Tree

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, June 27.—(AP.)—Elsie and Hope Yoder, young daughters of Forest Larose Yoder, an American, were killed yesterday in a crash of a military plane piloted by Jacinto Yelen, who was seriously injured.

The girls were passengers in the plane, which had just left the ground when it struck a tree and was destroyed.

Former Prohibition Advocate Censures Present Evils

Saloons were vile—but were they as vile as speakeasies?

"They were not!" says Missis Jones grimly. "At least saloons didn't get on the phone and beg weak-willed men to tank up!"

And she knows what she's talking about, for she lived in those old days. She was a young wife then, and her husband took his glass now and then; but when he wanted to drink he had to go out and look for it. Hooch peddlers didn't camp on the doorstep, as they camp on her daughter's doorstep today, catching her son-in-law in a wobbly moment and putting ideas into his head.

Nor did they haunt high schools, watching their chance to trap youngsters with their vile stuff.

"Dear Miss Martin:

"Maybe you'll think I'm crazy for writing this letter, but I'm just so mad I could scream! And what am I mad at? Booze! Bootleggers! And, believe me, I have reason!

OPPOSED SALOONS

"I fought saloons. I was a much younger woman when we had them, and sillier, I guess, than I am now. Anyway, I thought that if we could just get them out of the community, everything would be bright and shining. Well, 'we live and learn' was an old saying of my mother's, and I guess it's true.

"My husband used to drink in those days; not so much, but enough to make me hate the stuff. I hated to see him coming home looking foolish and vacant-eyed, and talking silly, not to mention the good money he spent, once he got started on a spree. And there were others worse off than I, whose husbands spent most of their money before they got home Saturday nights, because the corner saloon cashed their pay checks.

"So I went in for fighting booze in a big way. I voted joyfully for prohibition, then I sat back and congratulated myself. It's wonderful, isn't it, how people can fool themselves into believing what they want to believe!

WRECKING HIS HEALTH

"Well, things went on fine for a while. My youngsters grew up. My husband died. My daughter got married about five years ago and has a little girl of her own now, and her husband drinks worse than her father ever thought of drinking.

"Nor does he have one speck of trouble finding plenty whenever he wants it. In fact, there are two bootleggers who know that once he takes a drink, he is off on a grand jag—and they won't let him alone. He tries, honestly, to keep off the stuff, but there are times when if anyone offers him a drink it sets him off. They know that, and if he doesn't order any 'stu' they phone him and ask him if they can't bring up a few 'choice' bottles.

"I am not for saloons, but I'll say this much. In the old days if a man wanted a drink he had to go after it; and now, in this day of our noble experiment, it comes after him. Russell, my daughter's husband, is wrecking his health and killing his future, just as much as in our wettest saloon days.

WORSE THAN EVER

"So long as that is true, of what possible use is prohibition to this country? It was supposed to 'protect' people like him, and it has betrayed them—made liquor far easier to get than ever before. In the old days there were plenty of saloon keepers who wouldn't sell liquor to a man who already had too much. In the old days they didn't sell liquor to high school kids.

"But a bootlegger would sell booze to a man, no matter what condition he might be in; and youngsters—new customers for their poison—are their meat!

"Several times I've 'turned in' bootleggers who encouraged Russell to drink; but they're as thick as flies, and some 'kind friend' soon introduces him to another one.

"Now I ask you, is that any improvement on things as they were? I'll say it isn't! The plain truth it, it's worse! What are we going to do about it?

"MRS. M. JONES."

Not a pretty story, is it? But can you honestly deny that it is true? And what are we going to do about it? What are you doing about it?

Don't Worry About What Others May Think of You, Advises Fay King

EVERYONE IS CONCENTRATING ON HER OR HIS OWN PERSONAL PROBLEMS—NOT YOURS!
I CAN'T STAND IT I KNOW THEY ARE ALL TALKING ABOUT ME, AND LAUGHING AT ME!
CHEER UP! NOTHING GOOD OR BAD IN YOUR LIFE CAN POSSIBLY INTEREST OTHERS AS MUCH AS IT DOES YOU!
WOMEN ARE NOT AS "CATTY" AS SOME WOULD HAVE YOU THINK
I THINK SHE'S CHARMING! I LIKE HER VERY MUCH!
SO DO I!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

There are some supersensitive souls who worry themselves into a state of semi-sickness over what they imagine others must be thinking or saying about something they have done which they wish they might undo.

Nothing is more foolish than this.

For everyone is too much occupied with his own interests and has neither the time nor the inclination to concentrate critically or otherwise upon what concerns you.

If you have done anything that you regret, the best thing you can do now is to forget it, as no doubt others have done long ago.

The only real remedy is to begin at once improving the present to such a point that it will become the very best explanation you could possibly make!

Dicky Offers to Solve Madge's Problem

I echoed the laugh with which Lillian had advised me to engage two physicians for 2 o'clock the next morning, if I gave my expected guests the shore dinner I had promised; but I wondered if her laugh was as hollow as mine sounded to my own ears.

Indeed, I was in anything but a mirthful mood. I did not understand myself. Ordinarily, the thought of guests—familiar guests, whom I like—is exhilarating to me, and I revel in making hospitable preparation for them; but for a moment or two after I turned from the receiver, it seemed to me that I could not possibly scourge my faltering spirits to the task of getting ready for these unexpected guests.

A NERVOUS STRAIN

A moment's reflection told me that I was not getting blase or inhospitable, and that my willingness to serve Lillian had not in any way been diminished while she had been absent from us. I realized that I had been subjected to a continuous nervous strain for several weeks, and that I really was not to be blamed for any vagaries of temperament, provided I could keep them hidden from my family and friends.

I threw my shoulders back as if bracing my body for a shock, and felt at the same time that I was also steeling my nerves and my determination to meet the household emergency which confronted me.

It was all very well to talk of "hanging youngsters up on hooks," but I knew that Helena Brixton's home held much of luxury, and I guessed that she was exceedingly critical of the details of other menages.

"What's the matter, old dear?"

Dicky's voice broke in on my reverie, and I looked up to see him standing in front of me. I had not moved from my stand before the telephone, and he was gazing quizzically down at my abstracted face.

MADGE EXPLAINS

"You look as if you'd been appointed head of a government commission to solve the unemployment problem," he said. "Cheer up! It may not be true! Probably they meant some other Graham."

"If that's all you can contribute to a most harassing problem, you would better get back into the silence," I told him with a laugh and distinctly lightened spirits; for he either had forgotten his annoyance at the wounded Chinese for his speech concerning my "belonging Lee Chow boss man," or had decided that it was unworthy of him to bedevil me about it, as he had done in the previous hour.

"You wrong me greatly," he retorted. "I can do a lot better than that. Come over here and sit down and tell me about it."

He put his hand upon my arm and propelled me—there is no other word for the motion—to a couch in the hall.

"Now, what's on the well-known mind?" he asked, and I told him briefly of Lillian's request to bring Carolyn and Ronald Brixton and Ronald's chum to the farmhouse with Mary and Marion.

"I hope Lil has a good reason," he said, when I had finished, "for with things as they are here, it strikes me as a pretty nervy thing to ask of you."

"You know you don't mean that," I told him reproachfully, for he knew as well as I that Lillian would never willingly put any extra burden upon me.

"Oh! of course, of course," he said, disgustedly, "but there's no use beefing about it. The thing now is to find out what's best to be done.

"Are you afraid Katie will balk at the added work?"

"It isn't that part of it that's bothering me," I said. "I can always manage Katie. The family is so large anyway that two or three more or less can be counted in terms of dishes to wash, vegetables to prepare, beds to make. I can provide extra help for that; my problem is where to put them."

"Where to put 'em!" Dicky echoed. "A bunch of school and college kids in the summer time? Put 'em in the attic, in the haymow, or in a tent on the lawn."

Having thus disposed of the problem, with characteristic masculine ease, he put his hand under my chin and tilted my face up to his.

"Not satisfied?" he queried, with a grin. "All right, I'll scrap those great thoughts and emit another one. Why can't Carolyn bunk in with Marion and Mary? That room is bigger than any dormitory room I ever saw."

"They can," I said, carefully omitting the information that I already had thought of that solution.

"Will you go out on the veranda and stretch out on the couch hammock for 10 minutes," he said, "if I promise to bring you a solution of the problem at the end of that time?"

Household Hints

Children's rompers and play frocks for summer may be made of crinkly crepe, which requires no ironing, and thus saves mother quite a lot of hot work during the warm weather.

Soak beans and dried peas overnight in water containing a very little bicarbonate of soda. They will not then require so much cooking. The color is improved if another pinch of bicarbonate is added to the cooking water. The goodness of dried vegetables is best retained by steaming instead of boiling.

Correct Manners -:-

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Long Gloves

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it necessary to wear long gloves with a formal gown? If so, are they taken off during dinner?

2. Are the little lace jackets worn with the dresses at all times, or are they left off if the dress is worn at formal affair.

3. Is it proper for a lady to check her wrap at a theater?

1. It is a matter of choice whether or not gloves are worn with even formal gowns. If the girl thinks that the effect is better if she wears gloves, then she should wear them. If she thinks that harmony will be served if the gloves are long, then she should wear long gloves; if she thinks it is smarter to wear the short, chic gloves now so much worn, then she may wear these.

2. The wearing of a jacket with the dress usually gives the costume an informal air.

3. Yes, if she really wishes to, but it is really better and more convenient if she wears her wrap and lays it back on her chair. She may wish to have her wrap if she goes out between the acts, and she will certainly find it most inconvenient if she has to stand in line to reclaim it after the play.

Gracious Refusal

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When your escort offers you his arm when walking along the avenue, would it be impolite to refuse and say, "If you don't mind, Tom, I'd prefer to walk independently?

A READER.

Your refusal needn't be quite so "definite" as this, but still it is quite proper for you to indicate that you would prefer not to take your escort's arm while you are walking with him. Say, perhaps, "No, thank you, Tom, if you don't mind," or just "No, thank you very much, Tom."

Contract Bridge -:-

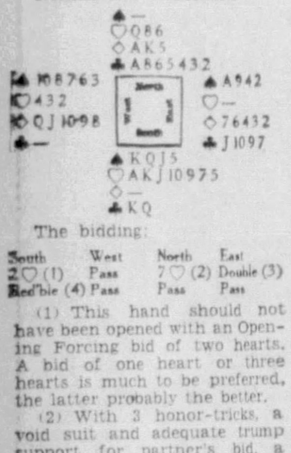
HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Playing Slams in Sweden

In Stockholm, as in all Sweden, Contract Bridge is extremely popular, according to Mr. Seth Wennberg, president of the Bridge Society of Stockholm. It is deservedly so, if the standard of play disclosed by Mr. Wennberg's sister on the hand shown below is at all general. The manner in which Miss Wennberg, sitting South, proceeded to make her Grand Slam was interesting and accurate in the extreme.

South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♡ (1)	Pass	7♡ (2)	Double (3)
Redble (4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) This hand should not have been opened with an Opening Forcing bid of two hearts. A bid of one heart or three hearts is much to be preferred, the latter probably the better.

(2) With 3 honor-tricks, a void suit and adequate trump support for partner's bid, a raise to at least six hearts is, no doubt, justified.

(3) East's Double is unsound. The bidding indicates freakish distribution and hence suggests caution.

(4) The Redouble is a gesture which can cost little and may be highly profitable. While the opening two-bid was not sound, North's quadruple raise must account for probably two of the missing Aces.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a two-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

The play of the hand was quite interesting. West opened the diamond Queen, which was won by the ace in Dummy, and the club King discarded by South. The diamond King was next led, and the club Queen discarded. South had thus paved the way to guard against unfavorable distribution in the club suit.

The next play was the deuce of clubs from Dummy, which was ruffed with the heart 9. This was important, as Dummy's three trump entries had to be retained to establish the clubs for discards of the spades. The 5 of hearts was then led from the closed hand, won with the 6 in Dummy, and the club 3 led and ruffed with the heart 10. Dummy was re-entered by leading the heart 7 from the closed hand, which was won with the 8 in Dummy, and the club 4 led, which was ruffed with South's King. The heart Knave was now led, overtaken with the Queen, and the losing spades discarded on the established clubs, thereby making the Grand Slam.

Interference in Activity of Glands Is Harmful

Everybody is interested in maintaining youth and health. From earliest times men have searched for the "Fountain of Youth," and even though they didn't find it, they did discover other wonders of the world.

Dr. Copeland

It is about twenty-five years since we were startled by the announcement of the discovery of the ductless glands in their relation to the life processes. Many false claims were made, of course, and there sprung into being various fads and cults promising everlasting youth.

Medical science has disproved such unwarranted claims, but interest in these glands has stimulated much experimental work. Valuable information has been added to our knowledge of these important glands. It is definitely known that the various glands of the body have important functions, and that any interference in their normal activity produces serious results.

There are several varieties of glands. Those which manufacture secretion and have no ducts or canals to carry away the secretion, called ductless glands, have a decided effect upon growth, development, health and the general well-being of the body.

The thyroid gland in the neck is ductless and has an internal secretion of a substance called "thyroxin." Decrease or entire absence of this secretion results in an unpleasant condition called "myxedema," in which the face is swollen, the skin is dry and rough, and the hair falls out.

Myxedema is found in adults and children. When children suffer from this affliction they are called "cretins." They show retarded physical development and are mentally backward.

The parathyroid glands also are ductless. There are four of these glands, and they are neighbors to and closely associated with the thyroid gland. It is only within recent years that we have known much about them. When their secretions are interfered with or destroyed, a disease called "tetany" results. In this ailment there is a decrease in the amount of lime in the blood, and this produces marked spasms of the muscles of the body.

In a recent article I spoke about a terrifying ailment known as Addison's disease, and pointed out that this disease is caused by a disturbance of the adrenal glands. These, too, are ductless glands and they produce an internal secretion called "adrenalin."

Addison's disease is characterized by marked muscular weakness. The skin becomes unusually pigmented and changes in color, all the way from a bright yellow to a deep brown or black. Until recently Addison's disease has been fatal.

The pituitary gland, the pineal gland and other ductless glands influence the general mechanism and health of the body. Disturbance in any one of them causes definite changes in growth and development. Growth may be so stimulated as to create giants, or so retarded as to create dwarfs.

It is hoped that in future years science will completely master these baffling and important glandular disturbances as the search for the "Fountain of Youth" continues.

WIVES CALLED TO BONUS CAMP BY LEADER

Huey to Hold Mass Meetings Here After Flight to Washington

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Mrs. George Huey, the leader of "bonus wives" from Pittsburgh, declared her belief that an avalanche of women soon would take joint control of the veterans' camp at Anacostia.

Mrs. Huey, who arrived with her son, George, Jr., yesterday afternoon in the airplane of Cyrus A. Davis, flying attorney, added that the camp was capable of lasting at least a year, and perhaps forever. She said:

"The presence of wives and families here is all that remains to make this community as firmly permanent as New York, Chicago or Pittsburgh, not to mention Washington. It is built on a solid foundation of high principle as well as stout scrap iron and trash timber. I look to see several thousand women here in a few weeks. They will organize themselves into committees and will hold meetings and send delegates with their men-folk in all acts of statesmanship.

HAPPY IN CAMPS

"I have interviewed a dozen wives who have been here for days and weeks. They are happy, well fed and comfortable. Those families have sent their furniture to storage back home, and now have no place to go even if they desired to leave.

"For my own part, I should want to live here on account of doctor's orders, if for no other reason. My physician has told me that roughing it in this camp is precisely what I need for the cure of nervousness. He said I have not had enough of the outdoors.

"That is true of the rest. Furthermore, the joining of husbands and wives has removed worry and anxiety and loneliness. The separations would have been a menace to all of them. If these separations had lasted they would likely have led to many estrangements. Separations are not good, despite the old belief that absence makes the heart grow fonder.

DUTY WITH HUSBANDS

"It is the wife's duty to be at her husband's side, to go through thick and thin with him. When they are thus together, they are unconquerable."

Mrs. Huey plans to return to Pittsburgh in a day or two and organize mass-meetings to mobilize women for the trek here.

BONUS CAMPS VOTE JULY 4

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—The boys who came to Washington to get their bonus money will decide on Independence Day what to do next.

Their executive committee has set July 4 for a convention at which the resignation of Walter W. Waters, of Portland, Ore., as commander-in-chief of the bonus expeditionary force will be considered.

At the same time, said W. S. Keyser, of Cleveland, head of the convention committee, the former soldiers will try to set up a permanent organization co-ordinating the activities of all veterans of all wars.

Such co-ordination, Keyser said, would "promote the political, economic and social welfare of all veterans."

But police continued their efforts to get the veterans out of town. They dispatched letters to all Congressmen whose districts sent bonus seekers to Washington asking them to see if the folks back home would provide money to pay railroad fare for the trip back.

Several representatives expressed a willingness to co-operate.

'Woman Ponzi,' Mate Get Prison Terms

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—(AP.)—Mrs. Florence Burgoyne McMullen, named by police "the woman Ponzi" because of promises to investors and her husband, Thomas D. McMullen, have been sentenced to from 1 to 10 years in San Quentin Prison.

The two were convicted of conspiracy to commit grand theft in their operation of the defunct Oriental Trading Company through which the state charged investors lost nearly $1,000,000.

Calles' Wife Shows Slight Improvement

BOSTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Senora Leonor Llorente Calles, young wife of former President Plutarco Elias Calles, of Mexico, who is nearing the crisis which will determine the outcome of a delicate brain operation, was more comfortable today than at any previous time since the operation.

Man's Plea He Stole To Feed Child Fails

His wife and sick three-months-old baby alongside, Frank L. Bowers, 23, of 1907 Forbes street, pleaded in Central Police Court today that he had stolen an auto and sold a trombone he found in the machine to buy relief for his child. Magistrate Leo Rothenberg refused the leniency plea of police and held Bowers for court.

HAUSNER FETED IN CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP.)—Stanley Felix Hausner, unsuccessful trans-Atlantic flyer, is in Washington today for a day's quiet and visit with Polish embassy officials after his recent tumultous welcome at Miami.

The Polish aviator, who was landed at Miami last Wednesday night after being rescued from his near-sinking plane far out in the Atlantic, was welcomed yesterday at the Commercial Airport by Stanislaw Massalski, secretary of the embassy.

He was escorted to his hotel by the embassy official. Today the flier was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Ambassador Filipowicz.

Hausner, who has announced he plans another Atlantic flight, will go to New York tomorrow morning.

CHINESE BOMB BRITISH SHIP

HONGKONG, June 27.—(AP.)—The British gunboat Moorhen was bombed by mistake today by Chinese airplanes sent by Gen. Chang Chaitong to recover a quantity of munitions captured by Admiral Chan Chak, rebel commander of the Cantonese Navy.

Admiral Chan Chak's gunboats earlier in the day had captured a Chinese steamer carrying a quantity of rifles valued at $500,000, which belonged to the regular Cantonese forces.

The planes were sent out to bomb Chan Chak's boats, but near Kiau Island they apparently mistook the British boat for a rebel craft. Six bombs were dropped near her, but she was not struck.

'Dead' Man Returns Home After 2 Years

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., June 27.—(INS.)—Although a body believed to have been his was buried here two years ago, Lawrence McGuire, World War veteran, was back in Bloomington today telling friends that reports of his death had been greatly exaggerated.

The body that was interred was found hanging from a tree in a grove nea here. Identification was made through a dentist who had treated McGuire.

Navy Officer's Gear Stolen From Auto

CHICAGO, June 27.—(INS.)—Just imagine, if you can, a naval officer without a uniform and without a sword. Ensign Earl T. Hydeman, of Piqua, O., was just that today. He had two uniforms and two swords in two traveling bags which were stolen from his parked automobile.

Immediately following the WCAE presentation, the Detroit broadcast of the International from the Masonic Temple in that city, with William O. Harris, president, as the principal speaker, is heard on the same station at 10:45.

A new series of satires on the foibles of modern life, "The Adventures of Don Quick," makes its debut over WJAS tonight at 10:15. Don Quick is a 1932 Don Quixote, who reads modern mystery stories, big business success tales and flowery romances and decides to revive the era of gallantry.

William Gibbs McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury and leader of the fight at the Democratic convention for the nomination of Speaker John N. Garner, will be heard over a Columbia chain, including WJAS, in a special broadcast from Chicago tomorrow morning at 10:30. Although his subject has not yet been announced, his talk is expected to concern the party issues.

PAPAL BLESSING ENDS CATHOLIC CONGRESS

Throng of Million Hears Pontiff's Voice by Radio; Huge Procession Held

DUBLIN, June 27.—(AP.)—Several hundred thousand Catholics, from all parts of the world, were on their way home today from the thirty-first Eucharistic Congress, which closed here yesterday with a blessing from Pope Pius, radioed from Vatican City.

A million members of the church heard the Pope's words of blessing, broadcast by loud speakers.

It was believed here to have been the greatest congregation Christendom has known. The benediction followd a solemn pontifical mass and a great religious procession 17 miles long.

PONTIFF'S TALK

The pontiff had intended to speak earlier but the transmission was faulty and he was delayed. He said, speaking in Latin:

"In the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, amen."

"Most beloved sons in Christ," I am with you. First of all, I am with you as a father with his exulting sons in order to have not only by means of our cardinal legate, but also by myself a certain participation in your eucharistic joy and triumph.

"Therefore, we together with you, supplicate and pray that Almighty and Merciful God, placated by the prayers of his church, graciously concede in such great tribulation of all peoples the gifts of union and peace, gifts which are, in fact, indicated in the mytery of the Eucharist.

"Finally, our heart and our lips open to you to express our congratulations and impart to you with very special affection our apostolic benediction.

"Through the prayers and merits of the Blessed Virgin, always virgin, Queen of Ireland, of blessed Michael, the archangel, of blessed John the Baptist, of the blessed apostles Peter and Paul, of the blessed patriarch Patrick and the blessed saints of Ireland and all of the saints, may the benediction of God Almighty, of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, descend upon you and upon your—indeed our—most beloved Ireland and remain with you always."

40 NATIONS REPRESENTED

The pageant and glory and fervor of the congress wove a rich tapestry of religion at its final session. Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, celebrated the pontifical high mass in Phoenix Park.

Forty nations and Ireland, perhaps more, were represented. Ten cardinals and scores of archbishops and bishops attended.

MOBS ATTACK IRISH PILGRIMS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, June 27.—(AP.)—Scores of Irish men and women nursed more or less serious injuries today after a flaring of the ancient feud between the orange and the green yesterday.

In several parts of Northern Ireland, Catholic pilgrims, on their way to the closing ceremonies of the Eucharistic Congress at Dublin, were attacked, stoned and beaten.

After earlier riots in four cities seven of nine trains carrying the pilgrims were stoned between Portadown and Belfast. Excursion steamers carrying pilgrims also were pelted with stones at Larne and several men were struck. Stones also crashed through the windows of the St. Narcissus Chapel at Larne.

The worst outburst occurred at Ballymena, where the Orangemen were on hand as hundreds of pilgrims gathered at the railway station to take their trains. Several pilgrims were beaten and kicked and women were roughly treated.

Grocery Looted On Opening Day

Frank Schiffman, of 2236 Murray avenue, has planned for months to go into business. He wanted a grocery store and finally put in a good stock and equipment.

This morning Schiffman opened his establishment. He missed his cash register, a new one, which he valued at $150. Then he discovered that groceries valued at about $500 had been carted away.

Steel Man Retires, Clevelander for Job

Charles C. Cluff, sales manager of the New York district for the Carnegie Steel Company, will retire Friday after 50 years of service. He will be succeeded by James R. Mills, sales manager of the Cleveland district. Francis Hardie will succeed Mills. Hardie has been manager of sales of the Illinois Steel Company at Chicago.

The woman is employed on the packet Liberty. Police are holding William Harris, 36, Negro, accused of stabbing the woman, and John Clay, Negro, said to have witnesed the fight.

Two Hold Up Men Flee With Suitcase

A suitcase containing clothing was stolen from Louis Sobel, of 1432 Fifth avenue, by two men who overpowered him a block from his home. He estimated his loss at $25.

Citizenship Restored To Ex-Stage Star

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—(AP.)—Mrs. Genevieve Davis Cosh, New York musical comedy star of a decade ago, was restored to United States citizenship here after being for four years a woman without a country.

She went to Australia in 1926 and married James L. Cosh, an advertising man. On her recent return to the United States, she was advised by federal authorities her citizenship lapsed after she had livd for two consecutive years in the country of her husband. Federal Judge A. ASSEMBLY OPENS RELIEF SESSION TONIGHT

POLITICS

Long, Wheeler Loom As Party Powers

By MARK SHIELDS

CHICAGO, June 27.—Out of this Democratic convention promises to come a new leadership in the party, a fact which the old Bourbon control of the South is realizing too late, and when opposition is unavailing. Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia; Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, and Senator Joe Robinson, of Arkansas, can see the change, though Robinson is not here to speak his mind.

Mr. Shields

In their stead will come party leadership through Huey Long, of Louisiana; Senator Wheeler, of Montana, and others who have caught the Roosevelt bandwagon and are attempting to ride it to a place of power.

Along with the southern Bourbons, Al Smith, James M. Cox, Newton D. Baker and John Garner are being swept into the discard, at least for the coming campaign, and for the next four years should Roosevelt be elected in November. Party leadership in the Senate will fall from the hands of Robinson, transferred to Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, who, according to all signs, is to be elected permanent chairman of the convention tomorrow.

It is the Long-Wheeler-Dill group which is writing the platform, and the kingfish from Louisiana is gathering every possible ray of the national spotlight.

* * *

Guffey Would Dictate Distribution of Jobs

What is true of the party generally is also true of Pennsylvania, if Mr. Roosevelt is nominated and elected. Warren VanDyke, state chairman, will do nothing contrary to the wishes of Joseph Guffey, and the Pittsburgher will dictate the distribution of patronage should there be a Roosevelt administration.

Sedgwick Kistler, national committeeman, has remained faithful to the Smith leadership, thus eliminating himself from the Roosevelt councils, now and hereafter. It is a matter which does not worry the Lockhaven man, so far as patronage and power are concerned. He has no flair for practical politics and finds it somewhat distasteful.

Kistler has been the party angel in the state for four years. He financed headquarters so long as John Collins was state chairman. When Collins was defeated by VanDyke in the triumph of the Roosevelt forces over Smith in the state, Kistler ceased to feel any financial responsibility for the Democratic cause, beyond the normal and natural contributions he might make to a campaign fund.

His attitude, not publicly expressed, but unquestioned, was that the other crowd had seized the reins, and they could pay the carter. That they will be able to do if Roosevelt is nominated and elected. If he is not then the Democratic organization in Pennsylvania for the next two years will lack even the stamina it has shown recently. And that, in local contests, is little enough.

* * *

Tickets to Writers Good for 12 Days

The ticket distribution for this convention, as compared to the Republican session, offers an interesting contrast in the atmosphere in which the rivals groups gather. In the Republican convention tickets were issued to the press for four days. In this convention newspapermen are furnished a book of tickets good for 12 days.

And, had it not been for the determination to break the two-thirds rule, it might have required the use of every one of these 12 tickets before a nominee was found.

For it now is apparent that Roosevelt's managers, despite their optimistic predictions, had little real hope as the convention neared that they could ultimately get the two-thirds. Otherwise they would not have decided to forget the archaic regulation.

Among Democrats here there is extreme confidence that they will elect a number of congressmen in Pennsylvania this year. There is no expectation that any overturns will occur in Allegheny County, where the re-election of all five sitting members is practically conceded.

But in Westmoreland County there is a belief that Adam Wyant, who twice voted against beer bills, can be beaten. There is also some hope in the Clearfield district among Democrats, and they even predict a victory in at least one Philadelphia district.

* * *

Candidates Unlikely To Stand by Platform

These hopes are predicated on the assumption that the Republican candidates will stand on the national platform as it touches prohibition. As a matter of fact, it is doubtful if candidates of either party, in districts where the prohibition issue is the livest question, will stand on the platforms. The Republican platform obligates no candidate, specifically stating that no aspirant for office should be bound by its terms.

On the other hand, it is doubtful if the Democratic party will pledge the party as a whole to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. There will be something of a resubmission plank, the resubmission for the purpose of repeal, but it will tie no one.

Neither party is ready to make prohibition a straight issue of conflict. In the circumstances, therefore, each candidate in Pennsylvania will make his own platform, but the Republicans are confronted with the economic situation, which they will have difficulty in explaining away.

Sunday Traffic Accidents Kill 4; Hit-Run Driver Sought in One Fatality

A second fatality resulting from an automobile and street car collision on Brown's Bridge occurred today with the death of John Mantsch, 47, of 201 West Thirteenth street, Homestead, in the Homestead Hospital. YOUTH FLEEING ROBBERY SHOT

A 17-year-old boy was believed to have been shot by police today when he and two companions, police say, were detected looting a grocery store on the Windgap road. The youth escaped amid a hail of shots which halted his two companions. The two under arrest said they were John Klem, 18, of Creek road, Robinson township, and Charles Desport, of 3 Ella street, McKees Rocks. They were held for further hearing.

West End police were sent to the grocery store of Catherine Kelly at 4001 Windgap road when neighbors saw someone breaking in. Lieut. Bernard McArdle and Patrolman Frank McFarland and Louis Cardell fired upon the three youths, who were surprised in the store.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

CHICAGO, June 27.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Yesterday a true Democrat, not politically, but religiously, died. He was a New York priest, Father Duffy, by long odds the most beloved man in New York City. I am of his faith, you are of his faith, for his faith was humanity. When you can make New York miss you, you must have been a man, and that's what it will do for Father Duffy.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

FAMILY OF 3 ESCAPES IN EXPLOSION

Dynamiting of Inn Near South Park Linked to Attack on Girl; 2 Sought

A dynamite bomb placed beneath the front porch of the Blue Moon Inn, a barbecue on the Library road, near the main entrance to South Park, early today wrecked the front of the establishment and endangered the lives of three persons sleeping in the building.

The occupants were Michael Voccola, proprietor; his wife, Alice, and his daughter, Helen, 18. The porch was splintered, windows were shattered and the cement block foundation broken by the blast.

TWO SEEN IN AUTO

Helen told Constable Ben Smith, of Bethel Township, that two men in a roadster had been seen about the inn some time previous to the explosion.

The daughter, Smith said, several months ago was beaten by a man from the Hill district. He was convicted and was to come up for sentence today in Criminal Court.

Mr. and Mrs. Voccola were asleep in the rear of the dining room and the daughter in the rear of the dance floor extension. They fled through a side window.

MIDNIGHT VISITORS

Helen told Constable Smith that she had returned home shortly after midnight from horseback riding in South Park. She stood on the front porch for a few minutes, talking to Steve Seliga, proprietor of the Park View Service Station, which adjoins the inn.

While the two were chatting, an automobile containing two men pulled up in front of the service station. Seliga walked toward the car and the driver immediately sped away. The blast occurred about 4:30 o'clock. Constable Smith said that he had found two discharged percussion caps under the porch.

Voccola said the damage would be several hundred dollars.

Today Judge W. H. McNaugher reserved decision on the petition for a new trial for Harry Jacobs, convicted June 8 of attacking Helen Voccola, 18, on September 24 last. Counsel for Jacobs raised a question of jurisdiction, and the defense and prosecution will go over testimony to determine where the attack occurred.

RATE CUT FIGHT STILL FAILS

The City of Pittsburgh's efforts to obtain from the Duquesne Light Company a reduction of more 10 cents monthly on the average bill remained unsuccessful today. After a conference among members of Council and City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt, the solicitor was instructed to ask the light company for more information on certain phases of the negotiations.

Babcock's Son Hurt In W. Va. Holdup

E. V. Babcock, Jr., 26, son of the former County Commissioner, was attacked by a holdup man while visiting in Charleston, W. Va., yesterday, and knocked through a window of a cleaning establishment, according to word received by his family here today.

Young Babcock, treated in a Charleston hospital, was not seriously hurt, it was said. Police are seeking his assailant, the family said.

FOUR-ALARM FIRE IN SPRING GARDEN

SWARMING FIREMEN FIGHTING SPRING GARDEN'S FOUR-ALARM FIRE IN THE RAIN TODAY

12 COMPANIES FIGHT BLAZE

Flames that turned an abandoned Spring Garden avenue packing plant into a roaring furnace threatened to invade the nearby homes and another plant shortly before noon today. After destroying the packing plant, the fire spread to the second floor of the adjoining Pittsburgh Shavings and Sawdust Company plant before it was halted by 12 fire companies.

A thousand spectators filled the streets and dotted the hillsides surrounding the two-story brick building, which, until two years ago, was used by the Federal Packing Company. At one time it housed the North Side Packing Company, and was a landmark in the district.

Smoke was discovered coming from the roof of the vacant structure by pedestrians, who turned in an alarm from Spring Garden avenue and Lager street. The nearby fire company, upon its arrival, sent in three additional alarms, bringing virtually all of the North Side fire-fighting apparatus.

Chief Richard Smith estimated the damage at $12,000, and declared the origin was undetermined.

W. VA. SPECIAL SESSION CALLED

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 27.—(AP.)—A special session of the Legislature has been called by Gov. Conley to convene at noon on Tuesday, July 12.

Eleven subjects for consideration of the Legislature were contained in the proclamation.

One of them proposed an emergency revenue measure by indirect taxation to raise approximately $1,750,000 to balance the state budget and an additional $500,000 for unemployment relief. The call recommended that the revenue be raised by a special tax on cigarets and other forms of tobacco and other luxuries.

Another subject was consideration of an amendment to the taxation section of the state constitution "so as to provide for a constitutional limitation of levies and the necessary legislative action to submit the same to the voters at the general election of 1932." Another subject included in the call was an enabling act to authorize receivers of closed banks to negotiate loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or other sources for distribution among creditors and stockholders of the banks.

DIRECT STATE AID LEFT OFF PROGRAM

Way Open for New Talbot Act, But Bond Issue Plan Gets First Consideration

HARRISBURG, June 27.—The special session of the General Assembly that gets under way tonight to draft a relief program will not have before it any measures calling for direct state aid as part of the pre-session agenda. The way is not closed, however, to the lawmakers if it is desired to pass another bill similar to the Talbot act of the last special session.

In the program agreed on between Gov. Pinchot and the political and legislative leaders the bulk of relief would be borne by local governments. Provision has been made in the program to start the machinery for a state bond issue to reimburse political subdivisions for the money they expend for relief measures.

The pre-session program as agreed on provides for legislation to permit local governments to borrow on delinquent taxes and also to increase their taxing power.

BORROWING LOOMS

The legislature is given the alternative of providing funds for a relief program either through increased taxes or borrowing. With most all elements of the General Assembly opposed to increasing the tax burden, borrowing is the only other way out. Repayment of a bond issue probably would result in increased taxes later.

Money from a state loan would not be available before the winter of 1933-34. A constitutional amendment proposing such a loan would have to be passed by the special session and also the 1933 regular session before being voted on by the people at the general election next year.

While this proposal appears to provide the quickest way of raising relief funds, the political subdivisions have no assurance that the state loan would be approved by the electorate. Defeat for a bond issue would result in the local governments being unable to get repayment from the state of the money they borrowed to finance relief during the coming months.

UP TO LAWMAKERS

Last fall when the Legislature met in special session to provide a relief program it was handicapped because of the provisions of the Governor's proclamation. It was virtualy a case of accepting the program of the Governor or nothing.

Such is not the case at present. The Legislature is to be permitted to work out its own relief program. The revenue to finance it must come from savings in existing appropriations, more taxes or a state loan.

The Legislature is given a free hand in the matter of providing revenues. Last winter the Governor recommended several tax measures which met with stiff opposition from the lawmakers.

Under the provisions of the call, the Legislature can pass another bill similar to the Talbot act to grant state aid to counties for aiding relief work. If such a bill is passed, it probably would provide that the money be returned to the counties on the basis of population.

Cut in Legislature Salaries to Be Asked

NEW CASTLE, Pa., June 27.—(AP.)—At the opening of the special session of the Legislature tonight, Representative Bart Richards will present a bill proposing a $500 reduction in the salaries of its members. The new salary scale would be $2,500. The saving would total $129,000.

Richards said bills also will be introduced reducing the salaries of appointive officers and departmental heads.

Bledsoe Free, Bell Awaits New Arrest in Jail

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 27.—Although exhausted by the rigors of presiding over the Bledsoe-Stengoni trial for the last three weeks, Judge S. John Morrow left last night for Media, Delaware County, to assist three home judges with criminal cases.

Nearly a half million words were spoken in the trial of R. C. Bledsoe and Cosmo Stengoni, acquitted of the racket murder of John F. Donohoe, one-time state trooper and deputy constable. The trial covered a period of three weeks. Including the three days of examination of jurors, Earl T. Chamberlin took nearly 2,000 pages of stenographic notes.

Tony Bell in his one day's testimony uttered 30,500 words. These have been transcribed by the court stenographer for evidence in the perjury charges to be instituted against him by District Attorney Wade K. Newell on the instructions of Judge Morrow as a result of conflicting stories told in the trial.

Bell was expected to be arrested today in the county jail, given a hearing and then sent back to Buffalo. From there he will be taken to Chillicothe, O., to serve three years in the Federal Reform School for impersonating an officer.

Miss Ruth Bledsoe, of Pittsburgh, who said she would stick to her daddy to the end, did, while the jury was deliberating she walked the streets for hours. She was the first to greet her daddy after his acquittal. Seven ballots were taken before the final decision. The first was 8-4, next four 9-3, the sixth 11-1 and then acquittal. Two women and a man held out for conviction.

BOLTS DAMAGE HOMES DURING RAINSTORM

Two Houses Struck, Third Hit by Falling Tree; Road Blockaded Several Hours

Several residences in Pittsburgh were damaged when hit by lightning during a heavy thundershower late yesterday, which followed a sweltering day, during which the mercury climbed to 85 degrees. More showers were expected today, which the forecaster said would be somewhat cooler.

A huge tree, also hit by lightning, was felled across Saw Mill Run boulevard near the Liberty Tubes, blocking the road for several hours. Traffic was detoured over Nobles lane.

A tree in the rear of the home of Dr. Paul W. Heasley, at 382 LaMarido street, Brookline, was knocked down, falling against the house and damaging the roof. Mt. Lebanon firemen were called out to extinguish a small fire in the home of W. J. Tragesen, at 298 Kenmont avenue, caused when lightning struck the chimney.

Mrs. A. J. Shipley, of 2330 Palm Beach avenue, Beechview, today was doctoring a pigeon forced down in her yard during the storm. One of its legs was injured.

A band about the other bore the identification "3926AU32 Pittsburgh." Mrs. Shipley kept the bird for a call from its owner.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

Now that the bridal weekend is over, the smart world will draw a deep breath, and then start all over again on a bridal day today.

For this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock Frances Reed, daughter of Mrs. James Hay Reed, will marry James Chambers McKay, son of the Thomas Jefferson McKays, in the Shadyside Presbyterian Church. It will be quite the smartest, large society wedding for some time, although the reception at the home will be comparatively small.

This morning Betty McKay gave the wedding breakfast in the Allegheny Country Club.

Town Beautiful Unit's Report Is Model

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

As a model annual report let this listener to club reports wholeheartedly recommend that presented by Mrs. John P. Jones at the closing meeting of the Ligonier Woman's Club on Saturday. Not only was the report typewritten so that it might conveniently be filed, but it told in concise, yet detailed, form of the amazing amount of work done by Mrs. Jones' town beautiful committee.

I imagine even some of the members were surprised to learn the number and variety of its activities — the cup awards to the townspeople for flower and vegetable gardens and lawns; the flower show; planting of 68 trees in co-operation with the American Legion, which furnished labor from the ranks of the unemployed; continuance of the 4H Club in the Ligonier schools and organization of a second one at Pleasant Grove; planting flower boxes in the town "diamond;" donations of seeds and plants to needy families and institution of a movement to improve the site of Fort Ligonier, in co-operaton with the D. A. R. and the American Legion.

The meeting, which was preceded by an executive board luncheon at the Hotel Breniser, was held at "Happy Hollow Manor," the W. C. Carnegie estate. While it was not a housewarming, it afforded the club members their first opportunity to view Mrs. Carnegie's beautiful new home. Incidentally, the real housewarming was held a week ago in true English fashion. The friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie, about 1,000 of them, came from miles around. They were met at the gates by Highland pipers (wearing the Carnegie tartan) who later led the guests through the new house, piping as they went. There was a prayer for the country and a prayer for the rooftree and toasts of all kinds—to the pioneers, to past generations of Carnegies and toasts to and from the neighbors, among them Mr. and Mrs. James C. Rea, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Srodes, Miss Alice Rowe and Richard King Mellon, the last for Rolling Rock.

Meet at Estate

But this is all aside from the club meeting. Other reports were given, all showing a busy and profitable year. The only program feature was an amusing little play, "They Critized," which was given by Mrs. Paul Peterson, Mrs. Joseph P. Gochnour, Miss Nancy McClure and Mrs. Max Smith. Punch and cakes were served in the dining room, where the walls are painted with old Ligonier Valley scenes, and the remainder of the afternoon was given over to viewing the new house and the magnificent grounds.

THE 6-TO-12 DRESS IS PARIS FAVORITE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, June 27. — Women who have a time of it to make a small wardrobe go a long way, take immediately to the type of dress which can be called an afternoon frock, yet doesn't look out of place after dinner, when everyone is in evening clothes. It is just this sort of dress which Paris dressmakers are making nowadays, calling it a 6-to-12 dress—and providing it with sleeves and a fairly long skirt.

* * *

IN ITS mid-summer version, it is usually of some printed stuff—light-weight crepe de chine, printed roma, or chiffon. Often as not it has full elbow-length sleeves, though sometimes the sleeves are just a suggestion of a ruffle, or an exceptionally wide and drooped shoulder. It is shown occasionally by mannequins who model the dress first, with a hat, then later with an evening wrap and long gloves—to show how the same dress may be at home at a tea, a dinner, a theater or a night club.

* * *

THE HOUSE of Lenief makes this type of dress with a bias-cut skirt, so that the slimness about the waist and hips need not be disturbed to give plenty of fullness to the hem. One of this type, in printed chiffon—pink, black and white—is shown in the sketch. Its shoulder lines repeat the yoke effect of the skirt, with raglan sleeves that are full and blousy to just below the elbows, where they are caught in with scarf bands.

* * *

THE SAME scarf effect appears at the neckline, which is youthfully high.

BUCS TAKE LEAGUE LEAD

BUCS OUTPLAY ALL CLUBS IN DRIVE

IN HOLDING FIRST place in the National League pennant race there's a distinction and a thrill that Pittsburgh had not enjoyed in more than two years until the Pirates swept into the leadership yesterday by cleaning up a second consecutive doubleheader and scoring their fifth straight victory in three successive days. This is the first time the Bucs have led the league since May 5, 1930, when they were ousted by the Giants from the position of honor after an occupancy lasting only three days. Until last Saturday the locals had not been as high as second since May 6, 1930. Last year they were in the first division only one day, holding first place on May 25.

George Gibson

The capture of first place yesterday climaxed a sensational drive during which the Rovers climbed all the way from the cellar to the roof. They were in last place on May 23, and since that date Manager Gibson has kept them going at such a terrific clip that they have outplayed every other club in both major leagues. The Pirates in the meantime have won 21 games and lost only 9 for a percentage of .700, and in 12 straight series they have broken even or better in all except that with the Giants, which was curtailed to a single game by rain.

AS SHOWING HOW the Bucs, traveling at a .700 gait, have outplayed all other clubs since May 23, the Phillies in that period have won 22 and lost 14, for .628; the Dodgers have won 19 and lost 15, for .559; the Giants have won 16 and lost 16, for .500; the Cardinals have won 14 and lost 14, for .500; the Cubs have won 13 and lost 17, for .433; the Braves have won 15 and lost 20, for .429, and the Reds have won 10 and lost 25, for .286. Even the Yankees, with the best mark in the American League, have not quite equaled the Pirate pace in the same period, their record being 22 won and 10 lost for a percentage of .688.

There will be no cause for discouragement if the Pirates do not stay up there long for the present. Setting the pace involves a strain that sometimes does not work out well for a club made up largely of young players, and it may be better for the Bucs' future if they do not remain steadily in the lead. But it's gratifying to have reached the pinnacle, and the great climb places the outstanding feat of the major league season so far to the credit of the Pirates and Manager Gibson.

IF GENE SARAZEN had not already been recognized as one of the greatest golfers of all time, his victory in the United States Open by a sensational finish for a score of 286, following his capture of the British Open, would give him that rating.

Only Bobby Jones ever before won both big Opens in one year. Sarazen had no chance to equal Jones' quadruple triumph of 1930, being barred, as a professional, from the amateur tournaments, but he has at least done what no other pro ever accomplished.

NO OTHER MANAGER keeps the uncertainty of baseball in mind so constantly as Joe McCarthy. To him, no game is ever safe. He'll never take anything for granted nor pass up the most trivial point until the last man's out. In the sixth inning of a recent game, at which time the Yanks held a seven-run lead, Joe bobbed out of the dugout to insist that an enemy batter had struck at a ball when Umpire Bill Dineen said he had not. Under the circumstances, McCarthy's earnestness appeared a trifle absurd. But two innings later the score was tied. Joe can't forget that once, when he was managing the Cubs in the world series of 1929, they were leading 8 to 0 at the end of the first half of the seventh inning. Before the inning was over the score was 10 to 8 in favor of the A's, and it stayed that way. So no matter how lopsided the score may be, the Yankee pilot is in there fighting for every point, regardless of how unimportant it may seem at the moment.

Joe Cronin

CRITICS AROUND THE American League circuit agree that Joe Cronin would rank with the greatest of shortstops if only for his spirit and his fielding ability, and he is all the more exceptional in his position because he can hit.

You have to look beyond the mere averages to see Cronin's real value in the latter department. He was only one of 42 American League players to bat .300 last year, and he was well down the list with his percentage of .306. But the former Pirate drove in 126 runs. Thirty men made higher averages than Joe, but only Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth, Earl Averill and Al Simmons knocked in more tallies.

DIGGING INTO THE dope on consistently great hitters among the shortstops, Harry Salsinger finds that only six in more than 50 years of major league baseball have been able to hit .300 or better in five or more seasons.

The list is made up of Honus Wagner, Jack Glasscock, Hughey Jennings, George Davis, Dave Bancroft and Joe Sewell. With two years already to his credit and a long career still ahead of him, Cronin is figured to have a good chance to add his name to the roll.

OUT ON THE coast they were bursting with pride over the Olympic Village, the living quarters specially built for the athletes who will take part in the big games, July 30 to August 14. It was pronounced the greatest layout ever prepared for Olympians—$2 a day for room and board, with various amusement privileges and transportation thrown in. But already it has received a rap. Paul Bruyn, winner of the Boston Marathon and who will represent Germany in the long race in the Olympics, won't live in it. He took a look at the village and then declared he would hunt up a German boarding house where he could get German pancakes every morning.

WHEN THE ANNUAL track meet of the I. C. 4 A's has its 1932 renewal at Berkeley, Cal., Friday and Saturday, Stanford University will be striving to hold a point leadership. Though Stanford did not compete in 1925, it has scored a greater number of points in the last eight years than any other college.

In that period, Stanford has rolled up a total of 255 points. Southern California has made 223; Yale, 168; Pennsylvania, 116; Harvard, 112; Penn State, 111; Cornell, 100, and Georgetown, 100. Dartmouth's total score for the eight years is a fraction less than 48.

THOUGH JOE JACOBS, indefinitely suspended by the New York Boxing Commission, declares Max Schmeling will not fight in that state until he (Jacobs) is free to act as his manager and second, Jimmy Johnston, who arranged and staged the Schmeling-Sharkey bout for the Madison Square Garden Corporation, hopes to bring Schmeling back and persuade Sharkey to meet him again in September.

Count De Lavargon

"It would draw a million," Johnston said. "I thought Schmeling won the fight, as did many others. Certainly his title should not have been taken away from him. He is entitled to another chance. If Sharkey will not fight him, Max can choose his own opponent for a bout in August or September."

THERE WILL BE two titled contestants in the Olympic Games. One is Lord David Burghley, member of Parliament, and captain of the English squad, who will compete in the 400-meter hurdles to defend the Olympic championship he won in that event at Amsterdam in 1928. The other is Count De Larhargou, Argentine swimmer. The latter, under the name of Alberto Zorrilla, won the 400-meter Olympic swimming title four years ago, and will try to repeat.

ARKLE TRIPLE VICTOR IN NET PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

B. F. Arkle, sturdy Wheeling flash, captured the men's singles honors of the fourty-fourth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships yesterday as the Steel City district net feature terminated nine days' run before capacity throng on the Stanton Heights Golf Club lot. The Mountaineer star's final man-to-man victim was Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. ace and top ranking player of the Pittsburgh area, and the verdict read 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

The win carried with it Arkle's initial leg on the David I. McCahill Cup, reclaimed by O'Loughlin from Philadelphia possession of Bill Haseltine on Saturday. The West Virginian later took court with his singles rival to dethrone Dr. Billy McElroy and Dr. David O'Loughlin, 1931 men's doubles premiers, in the masculine dual wind-up, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

MISS ANDERSON VICTOR

In the women's singles conclusion, Dorothy Anderson, hard-hitting Butler entrant, reversed a decision of two years ago to down Dorothy Jarvis, Allegheny Country Club contender, 6-2, 6-0.

Arkle's victories completed West Penn clean-up for him, as he had previously teamed with Margaret Carspecken, Morgantown ace, to overwhelm Miss Anderson and her Tartan partner, Rufus Hartig, in the mixed doubles trophy round. Miss Carspecken and Miriam Sullivan, P. A. A. luminary, had still earlier annexed the women's doubles crown at expense of Miss Jarvis and her Sewickley teammate, Nancy Lee Byers. Incidentally, Miss Sullivan, who last June paired with Ruth Downey, of Chicago, to land feminine doubles laurels, was the only champion to repeat in any division of the contest. Arkle's local success parallels his achievements of a week ago at Charleston, where he galloped off with the silver ware in all of the divisions that saw him crash through here.

PLAY LACKS THRILLS

Aside from the doubles affair, which was warmly, if somewhat erratically, battled, yesterday's titlts proved a trifle disappointing to the thrill-seeker. Neither John O'Loughlin, nor Miss Jarvis, ever contrived to strike true stride in the face of the sizzling opposition meted out to them. O'Loughlin in particular exhibiting in a fashion distinctly suggestive of anti-climax to his spectacular work in his fourth and fifth sets against Haseltine the prior day. Arkle, on the other hand, displayed form that was not only brilliant on the attack, but likewise impregnable on defense.

PIRATES BEAT REDS TWICE TO PASS CUBS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

George Gibson's youthful Pirates were the toast of Baseball's vast domain today by reason of their sensational spurt from the cellar to the top position in the National League. The thrilling advance reached a heated climax yesterday in Cincinnati where the Buccos won another doubleheader with the Reds to land in the honor spot. The margin the Freebooters hold over the displaced Cubs is slight, yet it is there, nevertheless.

The main body of the club is barnstorming at Dayton today and will continue the exhibition frolic at Marion tomorrow. Some of the first-string sharpshooters came back to Pittsburgh this morning to join other regular hurlers who were not taken along to Cincinnati. The first-string performers will have little to do other than to point themselves for a three-game series with the World Champion Cardinals which is due to get underway at the Oakland Orchard Thursday afternoon.

Among those who returned from Cincinnati was Centerfielder Lloyd Waner, who suffered a foot spike wound in the ninth inning of the first battle of yesterday. The little fellow and Pitcher Johnny Ogden raced to the bag and in the jam play, the pitcher stepped on Lloyd. The outfielder had to be assisted off the field, Adam Comorosky taking his place.

Lloyd's wound was dressed by the Pirate trainer today. Although he was quite severely cut it was said he would be able to go to his post against the Cardinals on Thursday afternoon.

GRACE SPARK PLUG

It is possible, even probable, that the Pirates may lose their lofty spot even as they await further championship action. But if they do, they cannot be denied the praise due them for their rare accomplishment of the past five weeks. When Earl Grace, clever catcher, went down with injuries, the team hit the skids and it floundered until he returned. The gripping series of victories that took the team past the seventh and final hurdle yesterday was dotted with heroics, the like of which are seldom seen on any ball field.

In the first place, the sensational drive of the club reflects the fine leadership qualities of Manager Gibson. Then there is the angle of youth on the club; most of the victories have been annexed with boys like Vaughan, Piet, Grace and Barbee in action.

The double triumph of the Buccos in Cincy yesterday gave the Pittsburgh a card of four successes over the Reds in two days in the home-and-home arrangement. Moreover, the dual victory had the effect of giving the Buccos a winning streak of six games. The streak started in Brooklyn last Wednesday. The Reds were the victims in the other five battles.

RALLY IN NINTH

Gibby's stars put over a spectacular six-run rally in the ninth inning of the second game to reach first place. They were trailing by two runs when the last round began. Developments of such a nature are sufficient to stir the backers of the Buccos and it is stating the case mildly to write that the team's supporters are stirred up.

Larry French blanked the Reds in the opener, the lefthander allowing but four hits. French had to drive a wedge through Silas Johnson, clever righthander, but Larry was "right" to meet the test and his team copped the prelude, 5-0.

The six-run push of the last round of the twilight battle gave the Pirates a 9-to-5 triumph. Bill Harris and Owen Carroll worked the greater portion of this game. Bill Swift, crack relief hurler of the Buccos, moved into action in time to receive credit for the success. Ogden and Frey followed Carroll to the slab.

Designated as one of the most thrilling finishes in the history of Redland Field, the Pirate drive of the ninth in the second game was started by Traynor after one was out. Carroll hit Pie with a pitch and Barbee doubled to score Pie. Carroll then walked Suhr and hit Piet to fill the bases. Ogden relieved Carroll. Grace batted for Recruit Catcher Tommy Padden, the reliable Earl hitting safely to score two runs and send another to third. Swift singled to score Piet. Vaughan's single scored Grace and sent Swift to third. Paul Waner's safety scored Swift. Kansas City Bill then held the Red runless and thus clinched the double victory. The twilight affair was a see-saw game up to the closing rounds.

Capt. Traynor practically won French's battle. P. Waner walked in the third round and Vaughan singled. Traynor then hit a homer to right to give his team a commanding lead. The advantage was more than enough in view of French's brilliant pitching. Hits by French, L. Waner, P. Waner and Vaughan in the seventh gave the Buccos two more markers,

VINCE ELDRED ON SEALS' BILL

Vincent Eldred, Highland Country Club professional, who led the local stars in the National Open golf tournament at Flushing, L. I., over the last week-end, will be the guest speaker of the Trained Seals of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph during their weekly sports radio broadcast over WCAE next Wednesday evening at 6:55 o'clock.

Eldred tied for eleventh place in the crack field of the world's best players and will not have to qualify for next year's tournament. He will tell his listeners, in an interview with Tom Birks, golf editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, the highlights of the tournament and of his own experiences, as well as those of the other stars.

Also appearing on the program will be H. M. (Hub) Rinehart, local tennis star, who will be heard in two songs. Harry Keck, sports editor, will be master of ceremonies. Miss Marian Salmon will be at the piano, and Julius Levin also will participate in the broadcast.

Armour and Jones Beat Sarazen, Burke

FLUSHING, N. Y., June 27.—(AP.)—As an aftermath of the national open golf tournament, four of the world's greatest golfers played a match for charity yesterday and suffered untold hardships at the hands of a gallery of 2,000 fans.

Mostly because Tommy Armour was able to control his temper and his shots better than his comrades, the team of Armour and Bobby Jones managed to defeat the new open champion, Gene Sarazen, and Billy Burke, 3 and 2.

Sidney B. Wood, Jr., and Gregory Mangin, American doubles pair, defeated the English team of C. A. Magrane and J. R. Reddal, 6-2, 7-5, 6-4, to enter the fourth round.

Followers of Negro baseball in the Pittsburgh district today were excited over reports that the Homestead Grays, famous leading local colored club for years, have had their ranks decimated by the defection of star players and will have difficulty finishing the season in their accustomed style.

A fight between Oscar Charleston, former Grays' star, now manager of the Crawford Stars, and Reed, second baseman of the Grays, preceded the breaking up of a doubleheader between the rival teams at Greenlee Field last Saturday. The squabble occurred in the first game and the end came in the second inning of the second game, when a number of the Grays walked off the field, declaring they were through.

TO JOIN KANSAS CITY

The Crawfords and Grays played a doubleheader in Detroit yesterday, breaking even, and are to meet again in Akron tonight, the Grays playing with new blood in their lineup.

It was reported today that several of the Grays had left to join the Kansas City Club, vowing they would not return. It was said dissatisfaction prevailed in their ranks because they were owed back salary. Last week the Grays refused to go through with a game against the J. L. Thomas Club at Dean Field when the collection from a large crowd was deemed too small.

The coming into the field of the Crawfords, at their fine home park, Greenlee Field, this season, wrought havoc with the plans of the Grays, a traveling club. The competition proved so keen that the two clubs finally got together, with a prolonged series between them serving as the backbone of their local schedules.

COUNTY BATTLE HOT

With the Books clinching the title in the first half of the City League race and the Homestead Aces awaiting on edge for their big test with the Duquesne Republicans, Wednesday in the West Penn, sandlot fans this evening will turn to Wilkinsburg to watch the battle between the Millikens and Scott Morgans for the leadership of the County circuit.

Ranked as a first class loop, the County has been playing a bang-up brand of baseball, and at the present time, Carnegie, Scott Morgans and Millikens are tied for the lead.

The Holy City manager has not announced his pitching choice but Hussey will be on the firing line for the Morgans.

Greenfield downed the Homestead Aces in a non-league fray yesterday, 8 to 4. The McKnights won over the Millers, 12 to 4, and the St. Clair Frogs walloped the Harrisons, 9 to 1.

BUCS, YANKS LEAD MAJORS

Associated Press.

Quietly and unobtusively, George Gibson's Pittsburgh Pirates have moved into temporary command of the hottest fight the National League has ever known. Winning both ends of a doubleheader from the Cincinnati Reds yesterday, the Pirates snatched first place from the Chicago Cubs.

Larry French gave the Bucs their seventh shutout victory of the year when he limited the Reds to four hits and won, 5-0, in the opener. They won the nightcap, 9-5, by scoring six runs in the ninth.

REESE'S HIT WINS

Jimmy Reese's pinch double in the ninth drove in two runs and enabled the Cardinals to trip the Cubs, 4-3, in the first game of a double bill. Charley Root outpitched Dizzy Dean in the nightcap, and the Cubs won, also by a 4-3 count.

The Boston Braves split two games with the Phillies, taking the first, 5-4, and dropping the second as Ed Holley limited them to nine scattered hits. Bill Clark pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 5-to-2 decision over the New York Giants.

The New York Yankees protected their eight and one-half game lead in the American League by beating the Philadelphia Athletics again yesterday, 6-2. The Washington Senators tripped the Boston Red Sox, 8-4.

TIGERS DOWN SOX

Blanked by Gaston for seven innings, the Detroit Tigers took advantage of three errors and two walks after two were out in the eighth to score five runs and down the Chicago White Sox, 5-1.

Wes Ferrell won his thirteenth game as the Cleveland Indians stopped the St. Louis Browns, 10-5, in the first game of a doubleheader, but the Browns came back to win the second battle, 6-5.

Underwater Lights Illuminate Pool

With 40 powerful underwater lights illuminating every inch of the great white tile basin, with every one of the million gallons of water radiant with phosphorescent blues, the new swimming pool in Los Angeles is ready for the sons and daughters of King Neptune to strive for the world's aquatic honors during the tenth Olympiad, July 30 to August 14.

Shadows have been wiped out of every area and corner of the spanking new natatorium by the skillful spacing, placing and tilting of the lights and by the proper selection of both clear lenses and those that spread the beams of light into fan shapes by Westinghouse experts. Every movement under water will be as distinctly visible at night as will the track and field sports in the daytime's sun.

Following the Olympic Games, the swimming stadium will become the permanent athletic center for local, national and international aquatic carnivals and for the general use of the public.

ATLANTIDA VICTOR

MADRID, June 27.—(AP.)—Count De La Cimera's Atlantida won the Madrid grand prize yesterday, running the 2,500 meters in two minutes and 40 seconds to earn the major share of the purse of 50,000 pesetas (about $4,100). The winner's time set a new Spanish record for the distance.

MEYERS BOWL CLUB TO BE REORGANIZED

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

The Meyers Bowl will go on as a boxing institution in Western Pennsylvania.

Promoter I. D. (Apples) Meyers today announced plans for a reorganization of the club whereby he will buy out the interest of his brother, Louis, and carry on alone. Lew Raymond will remain as his matchmaker.

The club got into financial difficulties as a result of a string of cancellations and unprofitable shows this season, culminating in the poor house for the Kid Chocolate-Johnny Farr show last Wednesday night, which brought an order from the Boxing Commission to cancel tonight's show and settle up before the weekly meeting of the board in Philadelphia on Wednesday or forfeit its license and bond.

PROMOTER OPTIMISTIC

Promoter Meyers said the work of reorganization already is under way and would be effected before Wednesday. He hopes to resume operations next week, and predicts that he will ride the storm and come through the season a winner. He said:

"I feel that the series of unfortunate breaks that have befallen the club so far this season cannot be duplicated, and, once we get straightened out, everything will be O. K. again. This is our fourth year in the business, and we have had our ups and downs. Lately they have been mostly downs, but we'll get back on the upgrade again soon, and I am confident we face a bright future.'

Sport Vignettes

Kids' and ladies' days and general goodwill are going hand in hand with the Pirates' playing success, so that the recent rise of the local club's fortunes is proving popular with the fans.

Golfing triumphs came in cycles. Now it's Gene Sarazen, winner of the British and American Open titles. Before it was Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones. Wonder what would have happened this year if the great Jones had remained in competition?

This summer will go down in local boxing history as the era of the Big Splurge and the Great Collapse. It wasn't in the cards for the promoters to succeed with big promotions in lean times when they refused to gamble in the days of plenty.

The answer to the local boxing riddle still remains as pointed out in these columns some days ago—for the promoters to get together for their own protection, eliminate conflicts of shows and do away with the suicidal bidding for talent.

A good 50-cent and $1 club in the outdoors ought to weather the fistic panic in good style. Filled seats at such prices have it all over empty seats at inflated sums.

Dispassionate spectators at the ringside of the recent Johnny Risko-Mickey Walker fight in Cleveland report that the battle, while a good one, wasn't nearly so thrilling as it sounded over the air, and that Walker and not Risko was the real winner.

The failure of the Kid Chocolate-Johnny Farr fight to draw last week is a rebuke to promoters who think the public is made up 99 9-10 per cent of suckers, and that it will pay and pay and pay to see topnotchers mismatched against setups. If Chocolate and other fighters want to be well paid they should box opponents who can give them a fight.

Between Rounds

Johnny Hayes, of Philadelphia, is training at the Pittsburgh Lyceum for his 10-round windup with Ted Yarosz at Hickey Park, Millvale, Thursday night.

Jack Henry, of Beaver Falls, is booking bouts for Patsy and Lou Sexero, of Meadville. He may be reached by calling Beaver Falls 2560 or 9916.

Buddy McArthur's bout with Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight champion, scheduled at Fairmont, W. Va., July 4, has been indefinitely postponed because Rosenbloom has closed for a title bout with Lou Scozza at Buffalo a week later.

Hoover Answers Tax Query; Toll $8.47 Collect

DES MOINES, Ia., June 26.—(AP.)—E. Lee Keyser, president of the local Western League Baseball Club, received two lessons for one query about the new federal taxes.

He telegraphed President Hoover's office for an interpretation of the tax on women's admissions to the ball park. The reply came in three pages, collect.

The telegram, which was the first lesson, explained women admitted free must pay a tax according to the accomodation offered them.

Lesson No. 2 came when Keyser paid for the telegram. The telegraph employe said:

"The tolls will be $8.07, but the new federal tax on telegrams will be 40 cents, making a total of $8.47."

Frank Parker Wins Western Net Title

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—Frankie Parker, 16-year-old tennis wizard from Milwaukee, today was looking about for more and tougher competition.

The Milwaukee youngster, who still wears knee-length trousers on the courts, yesterday won the western singles title from Lester Stoefen, a towering blond from California, at the River Forest Tennis Club, and did it in workmanlike style. He used the first set for experimental purposes, and after figuring his opponent, wasted little time in grabbing the title before a torrential rain broke up th tournament, 2-6, 7-5, 6-4, 6-2.

LOCAL NETTERS FACE ACTION THIS WEEK

With the Western Pennsylvania championships out of the path, district racqueters turn attention promptly to other events of immediate importance. Next in line hereabouts is the second annual Westmoreland County open event, slated to get under way at the Greensburg Country Club Friday afternoon. The Westmoreland competition will last over the week-end, with final tussles billed for Independence Day.

An exceptionally powerful field, including many of the ranking stars of the West Penn tournament, have sent entry blanks to Secretary Don C. Snyder. Snyder can be reached at Atlantic 0358 by telephone in Pittsburgh; his mailing address for tourney entries is in care of the Greensburg Country Club, Greensburg, Pa.

The Greensburg program calls for action in men's singles and doubles, women's singles and mixed doubles. Prospective competitors are urged to place their names in Secretary Snyder's hands no later than Thursday. Edgar T. (Tack) Hammer, A. B. Kelly and Snyder comprise the committee in charge of hostilities.

Meanwhile, three Pittsburgh performers are in Cleveland today for opening contests in the yearly Ohio state championships. Billy O'Loughlin, Pitt-P. A. A. star; Sam Keller, former Duke net captain, and Paul Sullivan, another P. A. A. contender, left early this morning for the Forest City and should see singles action before the day is over.

O'Loughlin and Sullivan, Winged Head duo, will represent Pittsburgh in the United States intercity doubles tournament beginning at the Cleveland Tennis and Racquet Club on Thursday. This pair carried the Steel City banner in the inter-city title chase in 1929, when they were eliminated in four sets by the Reindel brothers, champions of Detroit.

Hammer Retains Greensburg Title

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 27.—Edgar T. Hammer successfully defended his Greater Greensburg singles tennis title yesterday when he won a three-set victory over Ira Fox, 1932 local champion, in a challenge round match, 6-1, 6-1, 6-3.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 27.—(AP.)—Chester Wilborn, sensational Des Moines Western League shortstop, has been sold to the Chattanooga club of the Southern Association.

ARLINGTON OPENS

CHICAGO, June 27.—(AP.)—Offering a stakes race every day and a dazzling assortment of big purses, the world's richest racing season gets underway at Arlington Park today.

W. S. Muckle led in the sweepstakes under full handicap at Stanton Heights with a net card of 64. The scores:

W. S. Muckle 92-28—64; G. I. Carson, 92-24—68; A. Kline, 85-16—69; W. H. Little, 92-22—70; W. H. Meenagee, 90-18—72; F. B. Wappner, 74-0—74; E. P. Almquest, 95-20—75; L. P. Tom, 94-18—76.

Al Gordon Victor In Curtailed Race

SALEM, N. H., June 27.—(AP.)—Al Gordon, of South Bend, Ind., was declared the winner of the Rockingham Speedway 50-mile sweepstakes race yesterday when A. A. A. officials declared the race off at the end of the fifteenth mile because four cars had crashed through the rail. Two other cars hit the fence in the trials, but the drivers were not hurt.

Bert Karnatz, of Detroit, was critically injured. His car struck that of Al Asten, of Philadelphia, and then spun against the car of Joe Russo, of Indianapolis. All three cars bore through the fence, throwing the drivers into the air. Karnatz was taken to the hospital when he was found to be suffering from a dislocated ankle, cuts and abrasions and possible fractures of the skull and leg. Asten and Russo escaped injury.

ROPE CLIMB MARK SET

LOS ANGELES, June 27.—(AP.)—A world record of 8.9 seconds for the 15-foot eight-meter rope climb was claimed today for Norman Farrah, gymnast of Los Angeles Junior College, as a result of his performance in the western Olympic gymnastic tryouts here. The world and Olympic record of 7.2 seconds was set in 1924 by a member of the French Olympic team.

FATHER, SON GOLF TOURNEY ON TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

One of the most popular tournaments of the local golf season is to be disposed of today when the fathers and sons play over the Fox Chapel layout, with the Tottens, of Stanton Heights, as defending champions.

This will be the tenth annual tourney for the dads and sons. The organization was formulated in 1922 with James Francis Burke as the guiding light. That year the tourney was played at Allegheny, and James Francis Burke and Scotty Burke, together with W. C. Fownes, Jr., and Henry Fownes tied for honors. This is the only annual tournament in which the players use the alternate stroke system.

BRAND IN TOURNEY

The international intercollegiate tournament is carded to get under way today at the Cascade course at Hot Springs, Va. For the past two years George T. Dunlap, Princeton star, has monopolized the tourney, and this year another large crowd of collegiate stars will be battling for the Dunlap crown. Pittsburgh will be best represented by Fred Brand, Jr., who graduated from Penn State in June. The son of the Allegheny Country Club professional is playing the best golf of his career just now.

Pittsburgh is more than gratified with the showing of its representatives in the National Open. It is true that none of the six won the title, but a former Pittsburgher did, and Vincent Eldred, Highland Country Club professional, played himself into the money and also saved himself the job of playing in the qualifying round next year.

LUTHER DOES WELL

Ted Luther, of Valley Heights; Peter O'Hara, of Westmoreland, and Sam Parks, Jr., of the Summit club at Uniontown, did themselves proud by getting into the select circle in the final day of play.

C. P. Sidwell and R. A. Young tied for first prize in the 18-hole medal play under full handicap at Edgewood yesterday, each with net 69s. The scores:

TECH TO TRY NIGHT GAME WITH OWLS

By JESS CARVER

Carnegie Tech has decided to go for a taste of this night football. From his summer home in Sherwood Forest, Md., where he plays golf and contemplates life in a free and easy fashion, Buddy Overend, Tech's graduate manager of athletics, has announced that the Skibos will battle Temple University's Owls in a nocturnal engagement in Philly Friday evening, October 28. The game originally was scheduled for the day following.

The announcement came somewhat as a surprise, as Overend and the Carnegie officials in the past have taken a firm stand against the night game. Earl Yoemans, who can bring tears to the eyes of the coldest of bankers when he wishes, made a strong plea to Buddy and rang the bell and the Techs will get their initial taste of night ball this fall.

One reason Overend has been dead set against nocturnal football in the past is, as he has pointed out, the added difficulty in detecting the phoney dollars at the gate.

The Owls and Tartans also have set a date for their 1933 game, which will bring the Owls to Pittsburgh for the first time. The game will be played in the Pitt Stadium October 7 of that year.

Pitt's annual summer coaching school opens today as Dr. John Bain Sutherland, the chief gridiron mentor, takes charge of a full enrollment of pupils for a two-week course. Following the gridiron school, Red Carlson will give two weeks of instruction in basketball and Frank Shea will offer a track and field course.

Golf Champ Awaits O.K. On Car Award

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 27.—(AP.)—Gus Moreland, 21-year-old Dallas (Tex.) amateur, who won the trans-Mississippi golf championship and a 12-cylinder motor car, remained here awaiting approval of the United States Golf Association before accepting the prize.

Moreland said he hoped to have a "definite and official" reply from the association in a day or two. He explained he did not wish to jeopardize his amateur standing by accepting the car without the U. S. G. A.'s approval.

MAT TOURNEY OPENS

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—The combined national amateur wrestling championships and semi-final Olympic trials starting tonight in Madison Square Garden, a one-outdoor bout in Long Island City, have drawn an entry list of nearly [illegible] wrestlers from every section of the country.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

WASHINGTON, June 27.—You can this year put a stick of nitroglycerin under the old adage that whatever team leads the league on the Fourth of July is most liable to win the pennant.

Nick Altrock

Why, you'd swear the National League standing was written by Horatio Alger this season. It only takes a couple of lucky wins to shoot tail-enders up to fame and fortune and the top of the league. The Heydler loop couldn't put on a more harmonious race if the eight eams were a double quartet and all singing tenor.

In the American circuit, the Yanks will be leading on the Fourth of July unless they get in a train wreck. But you can look for our Washington club, the A's or Cleveland to be leading the Labor Day parade, along with the Chief of Police.

BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

PENN MUTUAL ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED

Holgar Johnson Recounts Early History of Firm Founded 85 Years Ago

Few people today, who are familiar with life insurance as an American business institution, realize the idealism and high purpose inherent in its organization, according to Holgar Johnson, president of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company in Pittsburgh. He said:

"In the beginning the general public had more faith in the men who handled insurance than in life insurance itself. The early managers were rather exclusive in regard to their acceptance of policyholders. Few were admitted to membership who were not personally known to one or more of the trustees. There appears to have been the attitude that the company conferred a favor upon the applicant by accepting him rather than its being the recipient of a favor because of his patronage."

FOUNDED IN 1847.

The Penn Mutual Insurance Company was founded on May 25 1847, by John W. Hornor, a direct descendant of Jack Hornor, who served in the court of King Henry VIII of England, said to have been the "Little Jack Hornor" of the immortal nursery rhyme.

After studying English life insurance statistics for two years, Mr Hornor had interested 27 prominent citizens of Philadelphia in what he conceived to be the highest expression of mutual life insurance. They applied to the Legislature of Pennsylvania for a charter to organize. It was granted them, with a minimum collective insurance requirement of $100,000. The group complied with that provision and thus constituted the company, consisting of 65 members, who insured one another for a total of $224,500.

Of the 65, the 27 who had applied for the charter were named as trustees of the company, thereafter to be elected directly by the 65 and their successors.

HAD ONE EMPLOYE

The entire office force at that beginning, consisted of one man, the secretary, John W. Hornor. The president and vice president visited the office occasionally, in an advisory capacity, without salary.

In this eighty-fifth anniversary year, the Pittsburgh office alone numbers more than 100 men in the sales organization. The total membership has grown from 65 to 360,000, Mr. Johnson said.

Western Canadian Conditions Better

WINNIPEG, June 27.—Crop conditions are generally better over Western Canada than at the time of the last review on June 4, the Free Press third general crop report indicates. Featuring the report is the rapid development of the wheat crop in Manitoba as indicated by fact that 85 per cent is now in the stoblade and some beading out.

Virginia Tobacco Down 50 Per Cent

RICHMOND, June 27.—The 1932 tobacco crop of South Virginia counties will be approximately 50 per cent of what normally would be expected when the crop is cut in August, the State Commissioner of Agriculture predicts.

STOCKS NEAR BEAR MARKET LOW LEVELS

Important Dividend Meets Prove Disturbing Factor; Electric Sinks Sharply

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—The share market settled down into the neighborhood of the bear market lows registered the first of the month, today.

A steady tone in bonds, and a hardening tendency in some of the commodities, prompted a little rally in stocks before midday, but thereafter prices slipped off easily in spots, under light pressure. Traders were obviously uneasy over important dividend meetings slated for tomorrow.

Norfolk and Western registered an exceptional drop of 9 points, going well under 60 to the lowest in 26 years. Miscellaneous issues off 2 to 3 included Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, Corn Products, Coca-Cola, Eastman, National Biscuit, Delaware and Hudson, Westinghouse and United States Steel preferred, while United States Steel common, American Telephone, North American and Santa Fe sagged about a point to new minimum prices. Selling was somewhat selective. Oils held up fairly well. American Can, recent soft spot, lost only a fraction.

Norfolk and Western evidently encountered some selling in anticipation of the dividend meeting slated for tomorrow. The stock normally fluctuates rather widely in a thin market. The road is one of the few that has not yet cut its regular annual rate, which is $10. Last year's earnings exceeded $14 a share, but a substantial shrinkage is indicated for this year. Extras of $2 were ordered both last year and in 1930.

Santa Fe directors are also scheduled to meet tomorrow, and since they warned three months ago that continuance of common disbursements would require improved earnings, omission would not be surprising in view of continued decline in traffic. American Can and Allied Chemical directors also are expected to meet, and recent selling of these issues has evidently reflected expectation of some paring of payments. Westinghouse Electric directors are scheduled to meet Wednesday, and while Wall street had shown some inclination to expect continuance of the $1 annual rate on the common, the sharp decline in the stock today seemed to indicate otherwise.

With these dividends out of the way, the market will have something of a breathing spell so far as readjustment of disbursements to stockholders in leading companies are concerned. But indications that the relief program may keep Congress in session for another week or longer, and the prospect that the Lausanne conference may adjourn until September, tended to dim hopes of a resumption of the rally. In the meantime, interest in the Democratic convention was intense, because of the likelihood that important declarations on economic policies would be forthcoming.

GRAIN VALUES TEND UPWARD

CHICAGO, June 27.—Grain prices tended upward early today, influenced by heavy rains southwest and almost 6,500,000 bushels decrease in the amount of wheat on ocean passage. Besides, official estimates of the world's carry over of wheat totaled but 640,000,000 bushels as on July 1, compared with 656,000,000 bushels a year previous. Opening ⅛ off to ⅜ up, wheat afterward rose all around. Corn started unchanged to ¼ lower and subsequently advanced.

Except on price advances, wheat offerings were light, and were readily absorbed by commission house purchase orders. Corn and oats borrowed strength from wheat and from higher prices for hogs. Provisions reflected hog market upturns to the highest point since March.

WEATHER AIDS ELECTRIC SALES

Equipment Makers Expect Hot Political Battle to Stimulate Radio Demand

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP.)—Hot weather and an equally hot political campaign are counted on to revive the sales of two important industries—electrical equipment and radio.

Orders for electrical goods have been declining since 1929, when a peak record of $1,363,000,000 was set. In 1930, the total was $1,044,000,000 and in 1931 it declined to $715,000,000. In the first quarter of this year, the total ran 42 per cent below the corresponding figure of last year.

The decline has been due primarily to lessened orders for heavy electrical generating equipment from the power industry and to the postponement of electrification projects by manufacturing companies.

HOUSEHOLD APPLIANCES

The industry, however, has been quick to utilize the appeal of household appliances and lighter electrical equipment for sales purposes, and these divisions have turned in fairly good records.

Electrical refrigeration has proved a material help, according to the manual and quarterly figures on sales published by the nation's leading companies, but a new sales impetus is sought. The industry, accordingly, has turned to the field of air cooling and air conditioning.

It was noted last summer that motion picture theaters which were able to boast of cooling air drew crowds into their playhouses, and the industry was not slow to capitalize that. Today, it seeks to interest the home owner as well as theaters and hotels in air conditioning.

RADIO PROSPECTS

The radio industry is one of comparatively few that derives actual cash benefit from national political campaigns. The presidential elections attract a quadrennial radio following.

Despite this impetus to sales, the industry is not expected this year to manufacture more than half of the 4,400,000 receiving sets turned out in 1929. In this field, as elsewhere, the buying trend has been distinctly toward lower-priced models—and in many cases to a policy of keeping the old set going.

COPPER MARKET UNCHANGED

NEW YORK, June 27.—Copper remained quiet but steady, with only moderate sales reported in the domestic and export markets last week. Buyers generally were indifferent, and at the same time sellers were not pressing. Electrolytic was unchanged at 5⅜c delivered in the Connecticut valley. One large brass mill reported an improved call for finished products.

Moderate early advances in tin reflected adoption of the modified Byrne plan for curtailment of production in Bolivia, Malay, Netherlands, East Indies and Nigeria effective July 1 at a rate of 54,056 tons per year, or one-third of the output of 1925. Slight reactions occurred later in sympathy with London. Trading was restricted.

Lead was steady at unchanged prices, with buying limited to small lots for immediate shipments.

Pennsy's Management Holding Expenses Down

NEW YORK, June 27.—(INS.)—The big question market-wise as the new week opens is how much more stock has to be sold.

Thus with liquidation again an important factor, constructive activities will naturally be restrained. All in all, however, volume in the last few days hasn't shown any increase to excite alarm, and it is likely if a good reason for buying stocks suddenly developed the overhanging liquidation probably wouldn't make more than a mouthful to the demand.

Tomorrow is a big dividend day, including American Can and Atchison, but this unsettling factor will soon be over.

The Pennsylvania management is certainly doing things in keeping expenses down, for though gross dropped more than $51,000,000 in five months net only declined about $2,600,000. This is all the more creditable when the showing of other first-line roads like New York Central, which so far has been very much in the red, is considered, which makes it look as though Pennsy will make a quick comeback and adds attractiveness to the bonds. Reports from Washington that legislation is unlikely at this session to loan railroads money to buy in their own depreciated bonds, thus cutting fixed charges, do not necessarily mean that this will not materialize in another way.

The Owen D. Young committee, for example, might decide this was a good way of using up some of the billions in surplus credit that is burning holes in bankers' pockets.

Lynn and Tom Plan to Be Wed in Her Home Town During Vacation

CHAPTER XVII.

"Jennie, not quite as soon as that! We have to go house-hunting and I've things to get; it will take ages. And then there's mother and father; they don't know a thing about it, I haven't told them. Oh, of course, I've written about Tom but nothing to upset them. They'll want me to be married from home, I suppose.

"I don't see how I can be," Lynn added worriedly; "it would mean getting leave from the bank. No, I don't see how I can, or Tom either, for that matter. Perhaps they'd come on here. That's what I'll ask them to do. Oh, I wish they would!"

"Hey, hold on! Whether you leave this dump next week or in a month's time, it means I have to look around for someone to go in with me. Darn," said Jennie, "and we get along great."

"I know we do," Lynn told her, in compunction. "I'm awfully sorry, Jennie."

"No, you're not. I don't expect you to be. Oh, well, maybe something will turn up. For Pete's sake, go back and get to sleep. I'm more dead than alive!" Jennie said with a petulance which only partially concealed her dismay.

Lynn, being in love, was normally selfish. She told herself that Jennie would find someone to share the apartment with her and went to bed convinced that she would not sleep, and slept almost immediately, dreaming of Tom and preachers; of David Dwight and skyscrapers; of moons swung like lanterns over penthouse roofs, and through her dreams ran the thread of a magic melody.

She and Tom spent the next day—which was Sunday—together. Tom, waking perfectly fit, came to the apartment about noon, found Lynn up, dressed and breakfasted, and Jennie yawning and cursing the impulse of family duty which had prompted her to promise this particular Sunday to her sister in Flatbush.

ASKED TO COOK

She would be gone all the rest of the day, provided she ever got started, and Tom, sitting beside Lynn in a motion-picture house, had a brilliant idea. Why couldn't Lynn came down to his place and cook dinner for him? The desolate Slim would be out somewhere, drowning his unrequited love in quantities of red ink, and the young man who had recently been added to the small menage, an engineer in the broadcasting company, whom Tom had met through his friend there, would likewise be absent until late evening.

Lynn pondered this proposition for a few minutes. The conventions played no particular part in her momentary doubt. She had been at Tom's before this, generally with Jennie, always with other people; but going alone to his bachelor quarters did not impress her as a defiant gesture, not in this day and age. Nevertheless, something traditional caused her hesitation.

"Come on," he urged. "Why not?"

It had once been agreed between them that they should not stay in her apartment when Jennie was away and no one else was there. Nor did that restriction spring from convention, merely from the somber wisdom that they were very much in love and hadn't much hope that their love would be consummated with the customary legal and religious rites. Having come to a turn in the road marked "Danger," they had discovered that each could read. But now, of course, it was different—they were to be married soon—they were to be married very soon: that knowledge would lessen the tension; it is hope deferred that maketh the heart sick, and it is not easy to wait when there seems no end to waiting.

UNTIDY APARTMENT

He wanted, he said, to show her the improvements in the newest of his home-built radio sets. He urged: "Come on, do; it will be swell."

So, when the spring night was slipping toward dusk, they went down to the Village, walking arm in arm from the bus stop, and halting at a delicatessen to load themselves with packages, cold cuts, salads, tea rolls, spice cakes—"Not," promised Lynn, "that I intend to feed you this way after we're married."

"Woman, you'd better not!"

Down on Perry street was the apartment house where Tom and Slim and, latterly, Hank Mathews lived. It was an imposing affair of dusty brick, flanked by magnificent columns of synthetic marble in patterns of black and white.

On the third floor, which was next to the top floor, was the lair of the three young men, an ample five-room suite which cost them $60 a month. There were three bedrooms, a living room, a kitchen and a bath. Lynn, stepping across the threshold as Tom unlocked the door, picked her way over collars, socks and shirts. Articles of intimate apparel were draped over light bulbs, and dishes were strewn about.

She said, standing still in the welter of dust and worse than dust, "I don't think that I will marry you, after all!"

Tom came up behind her and swung her about, his big arm closing around her firmly. "Think again. This doesn't express my soul. I'm a tidy man, really," he told her solemnly. "It's Slim—and it's Hank; and last week half a dozen others slept here, off and on, three to a bed, and the guy that didn't get a bed rated the floor."

"It looks like a municipal lodging house. Only not so clean," Lynn remarked.

LYNN GETS BUSY

Tom dumped the delicatessen packages down, anywhere. "Darling, must you be so fussy?"

Lynn vanished into the nearest bedroom, screamed in horror, and flew out again. She added her hat and coat to the general chaos and went into the bathroom for a towel. Mutters arose. "Why do men use towels to mop up the floor?" was her plaintive question.

"Search me," Tom replied cheerfully, lighting a cigaret and sitting down before the radio. Discovering a speck of dust upon its chaste top, he whistled and took out his handkerchief. Dust on a radio was not to be endured.

Lynn appeared, a comparatively clean towel tied about her slim waist. She rustled about in the kitchen and while Tom turned dials, smiled or frowned and surrounded himself in blue smoke, there was a running of water, a clatter of dishes, a sound of brooms and of slapping dust cloths.

"What's the use?" he demanded as she dashed in and out on her errands of reconstruction. "It will look worse tomorrow!"

"I don't care how it looks tomorrow," she informed him severely. "I don't have to see it tomorrow, but if you think I'm going to spend my married life picking up after you, Tom Shepard—"

PLAN MARRIAGE

Tom grinned. He said mildly, "I wish you could hear this thing on a cold, snappy winter night. Summer's not so hot, in a reception sense."

"Tom, you might at least put these pajamas and things away!" Lynn wailed.

She did so herself, and it is on record that Slim, some hours later, searching for his night garb unavailingly for 10 minutes, cursed and went to bed raw.

Presently, "Let's eat," suggested Lynn, her labors completed.

"Happy thought!" Tom leaped up from his beloved obsession to assist her in clearing the battered table. After a time coffee bubbled on the gas stove and the clean plates were burdened with cold fare.

"Gosh, this is great!" He viewed her across the table. "Come here."

Replete, he pushed his plate away, pushed his chair back and held out his arms. Lynn came and perched upon his knee happily.

"It's as if we were married," he said.

"I know."

Darkness outside and the glow of lamps. The room took on an aspect of mystery and comfort. The noises of Perry street—children crying; children quarreling; mothers shrieking; cars passing through —faded to a dim murmur, and their own heartbeats were louder than any alien sound. They were fed and warmed and roofed; and they had each other.

"A loaf of bread," commented Tom, who always quoted Omar on sentimental occasions.

"They were tea biscuits," Lynn reminded him, "and we didn't have any wine. As for boughs——"

A dog barked in the street below.

"There!" said Tom, in silly triumph.

They laughed together, absurd, young, happy; and recited their worn but never monotonous litany.

"Do you love me?"

"You know I do."

"How much?"

"More than all the world; more than you love me."

"But that isn't possible."

"Let's get married soon—tomorrow!" said Tom.

"Well, no, Tom; I've thought it all out. Mother and father, they'll want me married from home. I thought it couldn't be managed, but if we ask for our vacations at the same time—?"

"Marvelous, dear Sherlock," said Tom; "we'll do that little thing. We'll put in our applications next week. Sarah's a good old scout; she'll O. K. yours—and perhaps she'll speak a word to Gunboat for me."

"We can go home," said Lynn dreamily, "and be married."

"And go honeymooning. Where?"

"What difference—where?" she wanted to know; and then, "But we mustn't go to a hotel or anything and spend money. We can't afford it. Look here, Tom, Mother has a cousin who has a little place in Virginia. She goes to Maine summers. If I asked her, I think she might let us have her house for 10 days or so. Wouldn't that be perfect?"

He agreed with her, without words but to the satisfaction of both.

Synopsis

Lynn Harding, young and pretty, is ambitious for a career in the Seacoast Bank and Trust Company. She loves Tom Shepard, secretary to one of the vice presidents, but will not marry him, feeling they both must make their careers first. Then Lynn meets David Dwight, a prominent lawyer, through Sarah Dennet, her chief at the bank. Twenty years ago he had been Sarah's fiance. When he married a woman of wealth and position, Sarah was broken-hearted, but she finally found contentment in her work. Dwight is attracted to Lynn and invites her and Sarah to his apartment for dinner. Lynn's roommate, Jennie Le Grande, a model, warns her that Dwight is dangerous. Later Dwight meets Lynn and asks her to lunch just as Tom appears. Dwight is relieved to learn that Lynn is not planning on an early marriage. He plans a party and invites Lynn and Tom. Lynn is surprised when Tom accepts. At the party Tom is not at ease. Dwight breaks in while Lynn is dancing with one of his guests and leads her out onto the terrace. He is treading carefully to attain his end. He kisses Lynn on the forehead. Tom sees them together and is furious. At home, the young couple make up and plan to get married. Against his will, Tom accedes to Lynn's wish that she continue working.

Now Go On

"I don't think I'll marry you after all," said Lynn.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Dogs, big and little, long and short, held the center of the stage at the regular weekly meeting of the Memorial Theater Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club Saturday.

The event was the first annual dog and "mut" show of this chapter. Long before the doors were opened the youngsters and their pets were lined up outside waiting for what many of them said was a great day in their life. The dogs enjoyed themselves, just as much as the children. When they were lined up on the stage they made an interesting picture.

DOGS PARADED

James Short, a freckled youngster, with his white Spitz, led the parade across the stage, followed by Elmer Ondeka and his collie. Lois Long followed with her collie, which was chased across the stage by William McKee's toy fox terrier. The members had a good laugh out of the incident. Then Jean Brown's wired haired terrier brought gales of laughter with his antics. Then the biggest dog in the show was presented. This was a fox and coon hound owned by George Figiel.

Doris Titzell and her Boston bull next held the spotlight. Mary Ringler with her black "pom" was followed by Virginia Razny and her pet. When Virginia was asked to name the breed of her dog, she just shook her head and said:

"I don't know, just 'dog,' I guess."

Walter Figiel, brother of the chap with the biggest dog, had as his entry a white poodle. George Wilson and Olive May Lindey exhibited the smallest dogs in the show. George, with his brown Mexican hairless, and Olive May with a white Mexican hairless, both of which were no larger than the palm of your hand.

'MUT' BRINGS LAUGH

Eanst Mossburg came in with a little black rat terrier, just a bit larger than the Mexican hairless dogs. Then Audrey Giles with "just a dog," followed by Scharma Caldwell and a very beautiful Scotch collie, held the center of interest until Elizabeth Carey and her half collie and half shepherd made their bow to the members. Anna Svalevick with her "mut" brought a laugh from everyone including Joe Murdock, the manager of the Memorial Theater.

Eugene Judkovitz, with a white spitz; John Sakel's "just dog;" Charlotte Sharkey's English bull, and Irene Bookel, with a brindle bull, completed the parade of the proud little owners and their "pals." All in all it was a great day for the youngsters and their pets at the Memorial Theater, McKeesport.

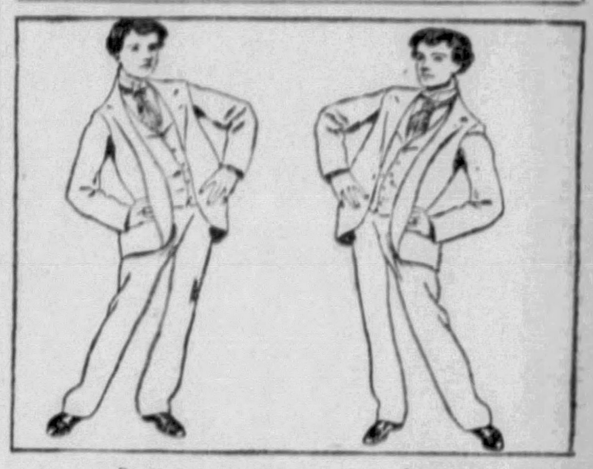
WE TEACH YOU HOW TO BECOME A RADIO ANNOUNCER.



Correct Position. Incorrect Position.

"It is a beautiful truth that all men contain something of the artist in them."—Walt Whitman.

WHAT burns us up, in teaching radio announcing by mail, is to have some mug send us a special delivery saying, "Pshaw, I can't speak in public. I feel so awkward. Send me back my tuition fee."

Our answer to that is, "Oh, fiddlesticks."

You can become a radio announcer. For all you know you possess hidden powers which will sway and charm millions. You will get letters from lonely women. You get away from home every night. Show us a pupil who wants his tuition back and we'll show you a weak and spineless creature who doesn't know his own mind—a jelly fish. Get hep to yourself. We haven't time to pamper you. Boost the course. Don't knock. Let's have a little school spirit. Only a rat deserts a sinking ship. Those who quit the course had better go on a cheese diet. That's our advice. Twenty-three, skiddoo.

Legislature Meets

Rising Tide of Unemployment Makes It Essential to Provide for All Contingencies.

The Legislature started its special session to provide emergency relief this morning. In determining the amounts to be appropriated it should take into consideration the fact the tide of unemployment is rising. There are more jobless today than at the beginning of the year. This makes it essential that sufficient margin be allowed to take care of further additions to the ranks of unemployed if they occur.

It is to be hoped that the present summer will see a turn toward business improvement, but in the absence of any reliable indications of the future, it would be foolish to do a half-way job and not to provide for every possible contingency.

The monthly survey of the American Federation of Labor declares that unemployment in the entire country has been increasing at the rate of 280,000 persons a month since January. This means that 1,400,000 have lost their jobs this year and, if the increase continues, we shall have over 13,000,000 out of work by next January.

No business crisis in the past lasted more than three years before recovery started. If precedent means anything, industry should be on the upgrade at the close of the present summer. We should take an optimistic view of the future, but that should not bar us from guarding against further calamities.

Arson Suspect Talks

Man Under Arrest Is Said to Have Named Several in Incendiary Plot.

An arson ring is said to have been uncovered through investigation of the destruction of a Rankin building used as a store and home by the occupant. One of four persons arrested by county detectives is said to have confessed, and is alleged to have implicated himself and others in additional fires, saying that they planned the destruction of a number of unoccupied houses in Braddock.

Whether the story of the man is supported by other evidence or not, it appears to be quite certain that the fire in the store mentioned and others in which the suspects are thought to have been implicated were incendiary. For that reason, it is to be hoped that success will crown the efforts of the county authorities to ascertain who has been responsible and to see that they suffer the penalty provided by the law.

The firebug is one of the most dangerous of menaces in any community, and the crime of arson cannot be too severely dealt with. Fires they start for the purpose of swindling the insurance companies often result in a far worse crime—murder—for life frequently is lost in flames spread by the torch of the incendiary. The fact that these fiends usually work at night, when honest people are in their beds, compounds the hazard of living in a community where the fire-setter, often a hired "professional," is at work.

Guards at River Pools

Now It Is Up to Youngsters to Observe Hours Assigned to Own Safety.

Well, kids, the ol' swimmin' hole is now o. k. Life guards for the river bathing pools have been appointed, and there will be a guard at each pool from 11 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock at night every day, Sunday included. And right here, let us say, we're off any kid that will go swimming in a river pool when a life guard is not on duty.

Fellows, we've always been your pal, and we hope we always will be. Because we like you so well we don't want you to sneak off when folks ain't watchin' and get yourself drown-ded. You know how it is, don't you? Your folks are expectin' you to be President some day, maybe, and how can you if you ain't here at the time? Good gosh, a fellow hadn't ought to take a chance with his own life, except to save somebody else's. But just remember that hero stuff begins by not deceiving your mom an' pop about goin' swimmin' durin' hours when there's no guard at the pools or any time the folks say not to.

Come on now, you're a lot of good guys—let's all mind the rules this summer—and always.

Summer Schools Begin

Classes Are Open to Unemployed, but Everybody Can Study at Home.

The summer school season begins today in two public school buildings, where vocational classes will be conducted under the auspices of the Board of Public Education. There will be instruction in trades for men, trades and household economy for women, and commercial instruction for both.

Many persons who are unemployed will take advantage of the opportunity to go to school again. That is a point hundreds might consider to their advantage. Hours not spent in gainful employment need not necessarily be unprofitable hours. In a private school in Pittsburgh, right now, there is a contractor, with no work on hand, who is taking a business course.

There is a great deal, too, that can be learned without the aid of a tutor, if a person is determined. The library is free and the librarians are helpful.

THE HEARST PAPERS ADVOCATE:

Miss Democracy is in somewhat of a muddle.

To plunge or not to plunge is the question that perturbs her. Whether 'tis better to stand on the bank of the REPEAL creek and dangle her toes in the refreshing water, or boldly doff her raiment, tuck her cute curls in a rubber bathing cap and dive in.

This week we will know her decision.

In the meantime, to guide her, let it be known that her favorite sons, who are NOT political hedgers, want her to dive in without any quibbling.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Lovers and Ex-Lovers

When Solomon, the wise and great,
Found things of State a dreary bore,
He blithely set a wedding date—
And married one or two girls more!

* * *

When Bluebeard felt at odds with life,
He did not mope and pine away;
He simply killed another wife—
And brightened up the passing day!

When Don Juan had a tedious day,
And felt that something ought to start,
He lightly loved—and rode away—
And broke another woman's heart!

* * *

Oh, well, these men MUST have their flings—
Something to brighten and amuse them—
To take their minds off weighty things:
And how can any girl refuse them?

* * *

The girl who takes a man out of a bachelor-flat or a hotel and marries him is regarded as a deliverer. But the girl who takes him out of his mother's home and marries him is looked upon as a deliberate housebreaker.

A man always vows he will never marry another woman, if you turn him down; but he never feels quite so certain about it after you've taken him up.

* * *

It takes more strength of will than any normal woman possesses to say "No" to a man she loves, when he pleads for "another chance," "another kiss," or another helping of the food that disagrees with him.

* * *

The average woman may not be able to throw a ball straight or hit anything at which she tosses a stone; but her aim always seems to be perfectly accurate, when she starts out to shoot her husband.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

Rather than withstand some jibes and comments, do you often do something that you know you should not do?

Many of the things which bring sorrow, regret and loss of money, friends and reputations are the result of daring to do, rather than not to do, things that involve a sort of risk.

Why not stand up and refuse, absolutely and stick it out when you know what the crowd wants you to do is injurious to health, happiness, contentment?

Perhaps you have just about established yourself in the good graces of those who were once disappointed and disgraced by your actions.

You have almost proven your reformation to your family—and now fail?

Perhaps you are wavering between right and wrong—what is best for you and for those near and dear to you.

Don't weaken; don't be persuaded by the fellow who is tempting you.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 27.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Awoke and did on my new robe of white toweling from Algiers. And came a deserved rebuke from Ring Lardner about a roughage that crept into my column, saying: "You do not need that any more than Ed Wynn needs Bert Lahr's description of a bull fight."

By post, too, a shipboard kodak of the Frazier Hunts and son, Bob, and the Bruce Bairnsfathers on way to Japan. At my stint and, by good hap, finishing with enormous ease. So with my wife and stopping in at the Roy Howards' new town house awhile and Alice Rohe, always engaging, there.

In the evening to dinner at the Will H. Hayses, they departing on the morrow for three months in California. Later to see the cinema "Scarface," and then walking across Forty-second street, gazing longingly into the window of a musical shop, in especial at an accordion.

* * *

Most of my life I've nursed a yearning ache to plolter along the keys of an accordion. One of my stage idols is the testaceous Phil Baker—chiefly because he can wander the world and, like a mad king of Bavaria, improvise tunes, scatter jokes and express a rhapsody of evocative moods.

* * *

A group of writers played battledore and shuttlecock with the topic—friendship—at Sid Solomon's corner table in the Casino last night. The idea was this: In a lift-time how many true friends does one accumulate? It was put more concretely thus: If you were in jail in Seattle, where you knew not a soul, how many men—or women for that matter—could you wire with your last nickel asking aid with any hope of reply? After considerable thought, one celebrated novelist declared he could think of only three men and one woman who would respond in such emergency. He scratched from the list half a dozen who might wire $10 and advise him to lead a better life.

* * *

Every now and then I drop into the sedate cinema, The Cameo, on West Forty-second street, remindful somehow of those brave little magazines of poetry that die to make verse free. It is never crowded and there are no military ushers or other pomposities. There are grim films from Soviet Russia, wild life in Borneo and the handicapped ambitions from Hollywood's Poverty Row. Yet about them all is something of awareness of realities and a steel-gray indifference to accepted movie formulas.

* * *

* * *

Something about trans-Atlantic phoning creates a mental vacuum. Twice in such fanciness my conversation flowered into inanities mailed on bathing beach postcards. You know, having a good time, wish you were here! So I like the yarn of the husband, whose wife, phoning from London, began: "This will cost you plenty, dear." To which he snapped: "Not as much as you think"—and hung up.

* * *

It is impressive, too, to observe the nonchalance of some people in receiving telegrams. A telegram to me always suggests the worst. I snatch it feverishly to read in breathless haste. In Bruce Barton's office the other day a telegram was laid on his desk by a self-effacing secretary. He continued to talk, fingering it carelessly lit a cigar and finally tossed it unopened to one side. After awhile he picked it up again, tore open an end and again absentmindedly flipped it aside. All that was needed was a suddenly slammed door and a lot of bright boys and girls thinking up ad copy would have been scared silly by a wild shriek.

* * *

The Palm Beach suit had the smallest sale in history this summer. Dealers believe the material too gay for such a sober period. William Waldorf Astor, incidentally, popularized the cloth in America. My single effort to cut a caper in a Palm Beach was cold-storaged by Will Hogg. Appearing on his Florida verandah as a house guest, so arrayed, he glanced up from a reclining wicker chair archly to inquire: "Off to skip through a few asphodels, eh?"

* * *

Also I take issue—in fact I've been taking a number of issues lately, but mostly just the cheaper magazines—with a London clothes stylist who says America's suits are too heavy and we have not acquired the aplomb of thin material. He's telling us about thin materials! And many of us on the last lap of a two-trousered suit with seats so thin we can sit on a dime and tell if its heads or tails.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

What is your duty? That is a very big question—the biggest question in every human life.

Today a young working girl is asking it. It is a common story; perhaps your own story.

This girl of 23 is the youngest of a family of five. The other four children have married and are now struggling to maintain their families. Anne also wishes to marry, but her mother objects. The father is dead.

"You cannot go," the mother wails. "You are all I have left."

"But I will not desert you, mother, even if I marry," says Anne. "We will all give you a little money. You can have a nice room for yourself somewhere near us. You will see us often. You will know we love you."

But this, says the mother, is not enough. She should not be left so, to live by herself, after all she has done for her children.

"It is your duty to stay with me," she cries. "You are young. You can wait for your happiness. I am old. It is cruel and ungrateful to leave me so."

Wrinkled old hand quivering on her arm; wistful old voice quavering in her ear; what can Anne answer? WHAT IS HER DUTY? Thousands of other people, young and old, asking that same question, facing that same problem, or other problems equally delicate, equally difficult.

What is your duty, my duty, anyone's first and most sacred duty?

YOUR FIRST DUTY IS TO LIVE—TO LIVE YOUR OWN LIFE. TO LEARN LIFE WISELY. TO SERVE LIFE TRULY. TO LIVE LIFE MOST ABUNDANTLY—THAT IS YOUR MOST SACRED DUTY.

How can you do it?

By using yourself to the full. By doing the most you can with yourself. Not FOR yourself, but WITH yourself—there is a difference. Doing things FOR yourself is pure selfishness and ends in a withering of life. But doing things WITH yourself means serving others as well as yourself—means a contribution to all other people as well as yourself.

THE FULLEST AND WISEST USE OF YOUR OWN RESOURCES — THAT IS YOUR DUTY TO YOURSELF AND TO THE WORLD IN WHICH YOU LIVE.

And that often means overriding sentimental claims . . . refusing to make sentimental sacrifices. For righteous as these claims and noble as these sacrifices seem to be on the surface, if they mean a narrowing and negation of life they are vicious, not virtuous.

An old mother pleading with her daughter to stay with her. That is a pitiful picture, and daughters who yield to that claim, sacrificing Youth to Age, usually get a big hand from society.

BUT THEY DO NOT GET A BIG HAND FROM LIFE. LIFE DOES NOT APPLAUD SUCH SACRIFICE. LIFE RESENTS IT. TREATS IT AS A BETRAYAL. PUNISHES IT.

We best do our duty to others when we most do our duty to ourselves. Anne will do more for her mother if she lives her own life richly, and lets her mother share that richness, than if she denies her own life and poisons herself and her mother by the bitterness of that denial.

"But how about the old saying that we should never do anything that hurts other people?" you say.

That old saying like much of our revered traditions, is bosh and nothing but. You can't DO ANYTHING without hurting somebody else. Every vigorous, progressive act will frighten the cowardly, irritate the lazy, embarrass the stupid and rile the vain members of your community. Every step you make forward will bruise a hundred pampered corns.

SHOULD YOU STOP STEPPING BECAUSE OTHER PEOPLE PAMPER THEIR CORNS?

GO ON STEPPING! GO ON LIVING! WIDEN AND ENRICH YOUR LIFE AS MUCH AS YOU CAN. And when others cling to you and beg to share your life and remind you of your duty, what then? Then do your duty. Share your life. But make them share your richness of experience, rather than you share their poverty. Make them go forward with you, rather than you hang back with them.

And if they won't go forward?

THEN THAT'S THEIR BAD LUCK.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Just Sometimes

Life has brought me trinkets,
Things too poor to prize;
Life has brought me riches,
Love in someone's eyes.

Life has lent me power,
Strength to fill the day,
Life has shown me beauty
In each common way.

Gifts of varied wonder,
For the whole way long,
And through all its giving
Life has given me song.

I could leave the riches,
Could forego the strength,
I could even go loveless,
All the journey's length.

I could let life take them,
All the lovely throng,
If it would but leave me
Still the gift of song!

Text For Today

PLAIN SPEECH FROM GARNER

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

One of the most significant and important political developments of the pre-convention week was the statement of Speaker John N. Garner setting forth, in downright manner, his views on outstanding problems before the people. He has acted wisely in remaining aloof from controversial matters until the work of the House is over. As the leader of his party there, and as the presiding officer, he merely respected tradition in remaining silent.

Now the session is about over and he has spoken. While true, as he says, that his 30 years in Congress have revealed his general views on government, and true that he has voted on at least some phase of every pending problem, his candidacy for the presidency, pressed upon him, makes his present action one of courage.

No man ever accused this white-haired, blue-grey-eyed fighter of cowardice.

* * *

The Reasons for The Depression

But his candidacy aside the views of the second most important officer of the nation are of importance. With these views we find ourselves in hearty accord. He puts his finger on one of the reasons for the depression when he says:

"This country has erected tariff barriers that are practically excluding the products of foreign nations. This makes it economically impossible for these nations to buy from us the products of our farms and our factories, thereby aggravating our industrial depression."

No economist will challenge the conclusion. No importer or exporter who does not know it. There are at this hour at least two million people out of work in America because of the loss of our foreign trade.

That manufacturers know it is evident in the fact that the greatest among them, in search of the lost markets, are now building branch factories in other countries with American money; these branch factories employ, not American, but foreign labor; this foreign labor is paid with American money which foreign labor spends with foreign merchants.

The House tariff act, for which it had a clear mandate from the people, provided for the opening of negotiations with other nations for reciprocal concessions making for the restoration of foreign trade; and Hoover vetoed it.

* * *

Garner Hits Straight

Like some of the other candidates, Garner takes his stand foursquare for a public works program to put the jobless back into the purchasing class for the benefit, not only of their wives and children, but of the merchants and manufacturers and farmers. He hits straight when he says:

"Enough work must be provided to keep the people from starving, and we shall be fortunate indeed if this irreducible cost minimum does not greatly exceed the amount provided in the relief measures which I sponsored."

Public work must be provided—or we shall face some very unpleasant music next winter. And the Garner bill, which is more advanced than any other pending, will not, we are sure, fully meet the requirements of the crisis. The time may come, with conditions not improving, when the most conservative will be driven to the conclusion that a five billion dollar prosperity loan would have been the most effective preventive of extreme measures.

But Garner recognizes the principle; and the nation's obligation—which is something Mr. Hoover, hovering over the ticker tape and seeing conspiracies in the fact that there is no bull movement in the market on stocks no longer paying a dividend, cannot see.

That is one of the reasons the public is forced to the conclusion that Mr. Hoover is unfit to grapple with the crisis.

* * *

Garners' Stand On 'Cancellation' of the Debts

Courageous, too, because it flies in the face of powerful financial interests, is Garner's stand on the "cancellation" or transfer of the foreign debts. It is worth recording that on the day James M. Beck was reminding the English people that the repudiation of debts means loss of confidence in the repudiators Mr. Garner should be saying:

"An individual who borrows money and makes no honest effort to repay is dishonest; and the same applies to a nation.

"If foreign debts should be canceled the credit of the nations involved would be destroyed and they can not borrow again."

This is such a trite comment that we are increasingly appalled by the insistence of persistent propagandists of the international banking group that it is dishonest and detestable that we should even ask our debtors to attempt to pay.

* * *

Honest to the American People

More honest to the American people, by far, is the statement of Garner:

"The government of the United States owes it to its citizens to collect from the debtor nations to the extent of their ability to pay and there should be no flim-flam accepted as to that ability to pay."

There is not a nation that owes us that is not able to pay by slightly reducing its budget estimates for war purposes. If they are not willing to make those reductions, there is no reason why we should take upon our shoulders the debt-burdens of the world.

What an affront to common sense and justice that this should be asked of us when we have the greatest deficit to meet of any nation; when our taxes have been piled on until the back of business is breaking; when we have ten million unemployed!

A snooty elevation of the eyebrows cannot answer that.

* * *

The Most Impressive Feature

To many the most impressive feature of the Garner statement is his unequivocal position on prohibition. The brevity of it illustrates how few words are necessary when confusion and concealment is not the plan.

Thus:

"When the prohibition amendment was proposed, I, as a member of Congress, voted against it. I have never believed it sound or workable and it should be repealed."

So that is that; "short horse soon curried."

* * *

A United Democracy Cannot Be Defeated

The day before the opening of the Republican Convention the hotels of Chicago, including the Congress, where all things centered, were lonesome, dull, heavy, with the politicians preferring to discuss anything but politics.

A week before the opening of the Democratic convention, Chicago was seething with excitement. It is evident that there will be plenty of drama. There will be clashes, and they will not be fake ones; clashes of personal ambition, some minor clashes on the platform. But this is nothing new to Democratic conventions, and especially in the winning years.

In a hundred years of Democratic conventions we can recall but two where the clashes in the conventions were destructive of the party's prospects at the polls—that of 1860 at Charleston, and that at New York in 1924. With the clear prospects of victory ahead, it is not likely that leaders' quarrels will greatly affect the attitude of the great rank and file.

And there are millions of men who feel the sins of omission and commission by the Hoover administration have wrought their ruin that will vote a protest regardless of what politicians may do or say.

Even so, the plain Democrat with no personal ambition or ax to grind and the party interest at heart will observe the fighting from afar with some anxiety. A united Democracy cannot be defeated at the polls; the convention can make impossible a united Democracy. There is the drama.
